Collection consists mostly of correspondence concerning business dealings among Clawson's family members in Berkeley County, W. Va. Although most of the items in this collection concern the collection of old debts, several letters from Thomas Dunn outline the hardships of frontier medical life. A few letters are addressed to "Dr." Jacob H. Clawson at the Ebenezer Academy near Rock Hill, S.
C. However, details of Clawson's professional life are unknown.

Clawson, Thomas W. Papers, ca. 1942-1944.
Wilmington, New Hanover Co., N. C. 4 items.
Sketch.

Chiefly about the Wilmington, N. C., race riot of 1898, as described by Col. Thomas W. Clawson (1854-ca.1942), City Editor at that time of the Wilmington Messenger and from 1902 to 1924 Editor of the Wilmington Star.

In 1944 L. T. Moore of Wilmington transmits two items to J. P. Breedlove, Sr., then Acting Librarian of Duke University. The first, written by Clawson shortly before his death ca. 1942, is an article entitled "The Wilmington Race Riot of 1898: Recollections and Memories." The second, "Exhibit A" to be considered an annex to the first item, consists of a copy of a controversial editorial in the Wilmington Record of Aug. 18, 1898, together with copies of papers pertaining thereto.

Clawson, Thomas W.

Both Alex. L. Manly, the Record's Editor, and his brother, F. G. Manly, the paper's Gen. Manager, were Republicans and Negroes. Wilmington Democrats and whites had long resented Republican-Populist-Negro Fusion's political ascendancy in the city, when the editorial brought matters to a head.

Clawson, Thomas W.

The Star published this editorial late in Aug., 1898, together with an affidavit about the Record and its personel by J. D. Taylor, Sr., Clerk of the New Hanover Co., N. C., Superior Court; and an affidavit by several Wilmington businessmen, mentioning John T. Howe.

Clawson states that the Wilmington "Revolution" or "Race riot" occurred on Nov. 10, 1898, the day after the election won by the Democrats restoring them to control of the city government. (See J. G. de Roulhac Hamilton, History of North Carolina, III, 284-297. On p. 284 he mentions the Wilmington "Daily Record," but Clawson calls it the "Weekly Record." The riot occurred on the 11th, according to Hamilton, p. 295. Clawson and L. T. Moore say it was the 10th.)

Clawson, Thomas W.

For six to twelve months before the riot, narrates Clawson, white citizens of Wilmington quietly prepared for action. Meanwhile, he declares, Negroes pushed white women and children from the sidewalks into the gutters. The

"Revolution" was a movement on the part of the Democratic citizenry to overthrow the political domination of the Negro, which had been made possible through the nefarious support of white Republican leaders.

The Record's editorial of Aug. 18 was "disgusting and defamatory" and a "base slander of the white womanhood of the south." It brought the situation to a climax.

The city was divided into sections with former C. S. Lt. Col. Roger Moore, Sr (1838-1900) serving as commander-in-chief of all white

Clawson, Thomas W.

Democratic forces.

The Democrats, under the leadership of C. B. Aycock, F. M. Simmons, et al., won the election on Nov. 9. That night a delegation of white Democrats delivered to a number of Negroes an ultimatum, in which they were to report by 7:00 A. M. the following day whether the Manly brothers would leave Wilmington peacefully and voluntarily. Otherwise they would be forced to go.

On the morning of the 10th the Negro newspaper plant was destroyed by a band of white

Clawson, Thomas W.

Democrats under former Lt. Col. A. M. Waddell, Sr. (1834-1912), who had served as U. S. Representative from N. C. from 1871 to 1879 and who was to serve as Mayor of Wilmington from 1898 to 1903. There were some white and black casualties and the riot started. This locality is known as "Brooklyn." Clawson's press, which the Manly brothers had been using, was destroyed. The newspaper office was set afire by parties "unknown to the jury."

About 9:00 A. M. a crowd of whites marched

Clawson, Thomas W.

8

from an Armory. After some urging, Col. Waddell had consented to head the "expedition of destruction," as Clawson calls it. But, he insists, it was not a mob, but a "Wilmington army of vindication of Wilmington's social security."

Clawson praises the operation of the machine gun outfit under the command of Col. Moore and one of his assistants, former C. S. Capt. William Rand Kenan, Sr. (1845-1903). The fearsome weapon, mounted on a large truck, drawn by two fine horses, was raced around "Brooklyn." The two officers had the situation well in hand when the military companies arrived to take over at a later hour. In all about 10 or 12 Negroes lost their lives in the riot, while two white men were seriously wounded.

On the night of the 10th when the riot was over, a number of Republican leaders, white and black, were placed in the Hanover Co. jail. Reports spread that a crowd was organizing to break into the jail and lynch these prisoners. But Col. Moore, together with Capt. Walter C.

Clawson, Thomas W.

MacRae, another Confederate veteran guarded the prisoners until the morning of the 11th when the latter were marched to the railroad station and banished from the city.

More fighting then broke out in "Brooklyn." One man was killed and numbers were wounded. Clawson also says that three were killed. This fighting was covered by both Clawson and a woman reporter who was working for a Northern newspaper syndicate.

He praises Z. B. Vance for freeing N. C.

Clawson, Thomas W.

from Carpetbagism, Scalawagism, and Negroism in 1876. Fusion later set up Negroism, but the Democrats in the election of 1898 again overthrew Fusion, confusion, and Negroism, according to Clawson. An outraged citizenry forced out of office Mayor Silas P. Wright and his six "lilly white" and four Negro aldermen. Clawson pays tribute to Col. Moore, Cpts. Kenan and MacRae, et al.

L. T. Moore in one letter mentions an interview Clawson held with Gen. U. S. Grant.

Clay, Cassius Marcellus, Papers.
Lexington, Fayette Co., Ky.

Cassius Marcellus Clay (1810-1903) held office in his native state of Kentucky and edited The True American, an anti-slavery newspaper. He was minister to Russia from 1861-1869.

In 1876, he sought the vice-presidential nomination of the Democratic Party. On Dec. 26, 1875, he wrote to ask for the support of W. Scott Smith for the nomination.

Clay, Cassius Marcellus

4 items added, 5-29-72: Letters from Clay to Edmund Quincy, the author, reformer, and abolitionist. Written from 1851 to 1856, they refer to Clay's anti-slavery views, the problems he encountered in Kentucky for speaking these views in public, and politics in this state. The letters are long and candid and contain frequent remarks on personal as well as political affairs.

Clay, Clement Claiborne. Papers. Huntsville, Alabama

The collection begins with correspondence of Clement Comer Clay, prominent citizen of Huntsville, member of Constitutional Convention (1819); legislator (1828); Congressman (1829-1835); Governor of Ala. (1835-1837); Senator from Ala. (1837-1841). His son, Clement Claiborne Clay (b. 1816, d. 1882) was educated at the University of Alabama and University of Virginia. He was an Ala. legislator (1842-1847), prominent as local Democrat and political leader. In 1853 he lost Congressional election, but Ala. legislature sent him to U.S. Senate where he remained until 1861. He was Confederate Senator, 1862-1864, being defeated in the latter year. In Apr., 1864, Pres. Jeff. Davis sent him to Canada with J. P. Hombcompe and Jacob Thompson as commissioner of the Confederate Government. They communicated with Horace Greeley regarding peace, but nothing came of it. Clay returned to the South and reached Richmond on April 2, 1865. On May 10, 1865 he surrendered to Federal forces, upon hearing of reward for his arrest as an accomplice in the Assassination of Lincoln. Clay was imprisoned at Fortresses Monroe until April 18, 1866, when he was released largely through the efforts of his wife. He returned to Ala. and spent the remainder of his life trying to pay debts and make a living on the plantation which had gone to him as a share of the family estate upon the death of his father in Sept., 1866. Clay took little interest in public affairs after the war and had no part in Reconstruction. He was in the insurance business (1871-1873) with Jefferson Davis, but the venture was unsuccessful.

Clay, C. C. (2)

Clay, C. C. (3)

His brothers were John Withers Clay, for many years editor of the Huntsville Democrat, and Hugh Lawson Clay, lawyer and soldier in both Mexican and Civil Wars. Clement Claiborne Clay married Virginia Caroline Tunstall who became a brilliant and popular social light in Washington society during his senatorship. She was a woman of much intelligence altho somewhat superficial.

Clay, C. C. (5)

She was undoubtedly of great help to him socially and in making valuable contacts and friendships. After Clay's death she married (1887) Nov.

27, Judge David Clopton of the Alabama Supreme Court. He died in 1892, while she lived on fighting poverty and trying to gather a living from the Clay plantation, until her death in 1915 at the age of ninety.

The collection is valuable from many viewpoints: it contains much political correspondence, and draws a picture of Alabama life in a well-to-do slaveholding family of the aristocracy.

Newspaper clippings concerning Jefferson Davis, the Civil War, Confederate veterans, Negroes, the Clay and Clopton families, science and scientists, political figures, woman suffrage, literary works and writers, etc.

30 items added 10-25-51. These include a letter from J.H. Hammond to the Charleston Mercury in 1857, announcing he will not seek a seat in the U.S. Senate; letter written by Jas. Morrow from Morris Island on Jan. 17, 1861 to Mrs. Virginia C. Clay in which he tells of their building a battery there and of the firing on the Star of the West; letter from Mary Clay tell.

ing of the activities of Meredith Calhoun in Paris, and one from Jefferson Davis to Mrs. V. C. Clay; letter of Feb. 15, 1865 from Hugh Lawson Clay in Richmond to his brother C.C. Clay in which a very dark picture is drawn of conditions in the Confederacy, much dissension among the officials, the lack of confidence on the part of the people in the govt., his opposition to the appointment of J.C. Breckinridge as sec. of war and to John A. Campbell, assistant sec. of war, and the deplorable state of the Confed. Treasury are all mentioned; copy of a portion of C. C. * Clay's diary which he kept in Fortress Monroe; copy of a letter from Mrs. Clay to her husband, stating that the President had granted his release; clipping of the report of A.J. Rogers of the Judiciary Committee on the investigation as to whether or not Jefferson Davis, Clement C. Clay, Geo. N. Sanders, and others were involved in the plot to assassinate Lincoln; Horace Greeley to Clay; Jas. F. Hammond, a daughter-in-law of J.H. Hammond, describing his plantation, "Redcliffe," in the days of slavery, telling how it operated, what the relation of the slaves to the Hammond family was like, and about their religious services, and giving the attitude of Mrs. Hammond toward their freedom after the war; undated letter of Bennett H. ginia Clay Clopton and predicting an extensive sale of her book.

A letter of Sept. 5, 1874 from L. Q. C. Lamar tells why he delivered a eulogy on Charles Sumner.

2 items added 2-24-54. The first is a letter written from Washington on July 5, 1838 by C.C. Clay, Sr. to David Hubbard. Clay states that he agrees with Hubbard that Reuben M. Whitney should not be appointed to any post in the Administration. He says that he has talked with Sec. Woodbury about Whitney and that Woodbury will not appoint him to any position in the Treasury Dept. He also says that he has been extremely busy since Sen. Wm. R. de Vane King of Ala. was "placed in the Chair."

Clay, C. C.

The second item is a letter written from Huntsville on July 8, 1857 by C. C. Clay, Jr. to David Hubbard. He discusses his race against Gov. John Anthony Winston for re-election to the U. S. Senate. He also says that a bill was introduced in Congress by Sen. Geo. Ellis Pugh of Ohio to provide for a uniform method of electing members of Congress, and that he thinks it will pass during the next session.

2 items added 11-19-57, by Clement Comer Clay as governor (1836) and U. S. Senator (1840). The 1836 letter to a governor of another state asks for information to be used in establishing a penitentiary in Alabama. Senator Clay made a recommendation for a midshipman appointment in the Navy in 1840.

1 item added 12-3-58: Virginia Clay Clopton writes to Thomas D. Osborne on Sept. 22, 1905, thanking him for his appreciation for her book, Memories of Mrs. Clay of Alabama, or, A Belle of the Fifties, and announcing that she is sending him an autograph and an inscription.

Clay, C. C.

Dorothea Lynde Dix, humanitarian, is the subject of a letter of March 24, 1848.

This narrative of Rock Island Prison, Ill., written ca. 1864 by a Confederate Soldier captured Dec. 12, 1863, in Walker County, Ga., by Col. Watkins' Brigade of U. S. Cavalry, describes the life in the prison, the prison itself, and the various guards placed over the Confederate prisoners. The anonymous author of this description finally escaped, probably sometime in the last half of 1864. He noted food, clothing, hardships, and cruel treatment, as well as the terrible pneumonia and smallpox epidemics that swept the prison. Confederate prisoners were induced to join the U. S. Navy and later the Army for a bounty of $100. The guards noted are the 37th Iowa Infantry, the 4th Regiment of the Veteran Reserve Corps [Mass.?], the 133rd Illinois, and the 197th Pennsylvania.

1 item added, 11-4-65: An undated memoir

by Mrs. C. C. Clay, Jr. about the arrest, imprisonment, and release of her husband and Jefferson Davis.

1 item added, 1-26-73: Letter to Captain George Starr from Clement Comer Clay on December 24, 1840. The letter involves the settlement of the Beauchamp estate and the distribution of slaves. Clay noted that the emancipation of these slaves would not be possible in Alabama.

CLAY, Henry. Letters. 1802-1852. Lexington, Kentucky. Sketch. 138 pieces.

Henry Clay (1777-1852) though born in Virginia, was identified with Kentucky. His long public life, as member of the Ky. state legislature United States congress, and the cabinet, needs no comment.

Clay's letters rarely omitted political comment, a fact which these letters well illustrate. Among the many subjects touched upon are the U.S. Bank, public finance in general, the Missouri Compromise, cabinet appointments in 1817, the possibility of the U. S. ' buying Texas (1825) the panic of 1819, the tariff and Nullification, and the Whig Party.

The letters exhibit to a marked degree Clay's overwhelming ambition to be President, and there is, with the advent of every election from 1820 onward, comment on his prospects for obtaining the nomination, and in 1844 especially there is information on the whole campaign. There are also several letters dealing with the trouble with France in 1836.

Aside from political and public matters, other topics touched upon include private debts, horse breeding, various laws suits, the sale and purchase of lands, appointments to West Point and other offices, the introduction of English cattle into the western country, a long discussion of the Kentucky Blue Grass as a plant, and Clay's refusal to give freedom to three of his slaves who made a claim to it.

There are several letters of Clay's daughter, Anna B., who married James Erwin and lived in New Orleans. She comments on family and personal matters and to some extent on Washington society. She died in 1835.

On the whole, these letters give a rather full picture both of Clay's public and personal life.

Clay, John. Papers. Preston, Lancashire, Eng.

John Clay (1796-1858), Anglican clergyman and British prison reformer, was chaplain of the jail at Preston from 1823 to 1858. His annual reports, first issued in 1824, made him an authority on prison reform in foreign countries as well as in Britain. He was influential with social reformers and the leaders of church and state.

The collection includes 157 letters of which all but about three dozen are addressed to John Clay. Most of the others are addressed to his son, the Rev. Walter Lowe Clay. There are numerous writers, but no long series of letters from any of them. The correspondence dates mostly during the 1840's-1860's and concerns the causes and prevention of crime, the methods to be used in prisons and reformatories, and appropriate parliamentary legislation. Related matters are alcoholic consumption, the condition of the industrial and agricultural working classes, and the roles of the church and secular and religious education.

Walter Lowe Clay, M.A., was curate of Holy Trinity, Coventry, and later of Christ Church, Clayton, George Rootes. Papers, 1801 (1801-1829) 1884. Louisville and Milledgeville, Ga. 35 items. Sketch.

George Rootes Clayton was born in Frederick co, Va., Dec. 20, 1779 and died in Milledgeville, Ga. on Oct. 28, 1840. He was the second child and oldest son of Philip Clayton (1747-1807) and his first wife, Mildred Dixon (1755-1799) of Va. and Ga. His father Philip was treasurer of Ga. in 1794, and also served as a member of the Ga. Senate and of the Convention of 1795. George was educated at Richmond

Academy, Augusta, Ga., and may have gone to Franklin College (now the Univ. of Ga.). At least during 1802 he was secretary to the Executive Dept. of Ga., and in 1806 Gov. John Milledge appointed him to the treasurership of the state, a position which he held for twenty years. He married Jan. 17, 1804, Elizabeth Mildred Hargrove (Sept. 17, 1783-Sept. 7, 1829). On Dec. 8, 1807 he became a commissioner of Milledgeville, and in that same year was lottery commissioner. From 1820 to 1824 he served as a trustee of the Univ. of Ga., and a degree, perhaps an honorary one, was bestowed upon him in 1827. In 1831 he was again secretary of the Executive Dept. During 1833, '34, and '35 he represented Clarke co. in the lower house of the Ga. legislature, and in 1839 was a member of the Convention from Baldwin co., Milledgeville.

Clayton, George Rootes

For information about his more famous brother, Augustin Smith Clayton, see Miller's Bench and Bar of Georgia and the Dictionary of American Biography. The latter errs, however,

Clayton, Sir William, First Baronet. Papers.
Marden Park, Surrey, England

Sir William Clayton, First Baronet (d. 1744), member of the House of Commons for Bletchingley, Surrey, 1715-1744, was a wealthy landowner. He married into the Kenrick family of Surrey, his wife being Martha Kenrick, eldest daughter of John Kenrick of Flore, Surrey.

Clayton was a trustee to the marriage settlement of the Reverend Dr. Scawen Kenrick and his wife Hannah, daughter of John Gibbons, a

Clayton, Sir William, First Baronet 2 planter in Barbados. Clayton's draft letter of Feb. 20, 1733, to Mr. Pemberton at Barbados concerns Clayton's attempt to obtain payment from Gibbons as promised in the marriage contract. The notation on the back of this letter includes the words "Coppy of mine to Mr.
Pemberton" which, being in the same hand as the text of the letter, identifies it as being Clayton's own copy. Scawen Kenrick (1694-1753) was at that time rector at Hambleden,

Buckinghamshire. In 1728 he had been chaplain to the House of Commons. Biographical information about Kenrick is in the Alumni Cantabrigienses.

There is a long letter of Aug. 10, 1732, from John Gibbons on Barbados to his daughter and her husband, the Rev. Dr. Kenrick. This letter is a copy sent by Kenrick to Sir William Clayton whose notation appears on the last page. Gibbons explained why he had not paid on the marriage settlement for his daughter, discussed his economic difficulties and those of Barbados in general, and asked for help to be admitted again to the bar and to be appointed solicitor general of the island. The economic problems involved the trading relationships among the British sugar colonies, Great Britain, North America, and the French sugar colonies in the West Indies. Gibbons noted the emigration of some planters with their slaves to the North American colonies.

Gibbons was a member of a distinguished

Clayton-Brown-Leftwich. Papers, 1802-1826.
Lynchburg, Va. 277 items. Sketch

While the collection contains a few personal letters, it consists mostly of such business items as letters, bills, receipts, and mercantile accounts of three firms. By Dec., 1819, the first firm, Brown, Leftwich, and Co., seems to have become Leftwich and Clayton. By 1821 there was a Brown and Clayton firm, but the Leftwich-Clayton partnership was still in existence.

Names mentioned include Chiswell Dabney; D. G. Murrell; Asbury Crenshaw; Lewis Pendleton; Francis Wilkes; Oglesby Scruggs; Anthony G.

Tinsley; Bennett M. Murphy; John Campbell; Thomas Leftwich; James Leftwich; William Leftwich; Col. Augustine Leftwich (b. 1794), a tobacco magnate; John Clayton; Samuel Clayton; and the following Richmond merchandising partnerships: Rogers & Merewether; Harris & Jones; John Fox, Thomas Richardson & Co.; and William and G. H. Mitchell & Co.

Subjects mentioned include Va. social life and customs; slave sales and purchases in Va.; and commodity, particularly tobacco, prices and sales in Richmond, N.Y. Great Britain, and the Netherlands.

Isaac Seaman, captain of the schooner Indian Hunter, signs a certificate pertaining to shipping merchandise from New York to Richmond.

There is a receipt of Oct. 15, 1815, signed by Bernard Ulrich Dahlgrén, father of Admiral John Adolphus Bernard Dahlgrén, for Archibald McCall.

A printed statement of Jan. 23, 1819, by Hayes & Story, Liverpool merchants, lists statistical information on British imports, prices current on American produce, etc.

Joel Leftwich, a U. S. Gen. in the War of 1812, writes to Samuel Clayton on Feb. 17, 1819.

There are several business letters from Maury & Latham, Liverpool merchants, e.g., one of Feb. 10, 1821, discussing tobacco sales and prices in Great Britain and the Netherlands.

More information about the Brown and Leftwich families, respectively, is to be found in the Alexander Brown and John Buford Papers (both of which collections were originally a part of the Don Preston Peters Collection), in this dept.

This collection was originally a part of the Don Preston Peters Collection.

1 vol. added, 4-12-65. A Memorandum Book, 1816-1818, contains financial accounts for the firm of Messrs. Brown Leftwich and Company of Lynchburg, Virginia. The notation "B L & Co." appears on several of the volume's pages, notably page four, the last page, and the one preceding it. The names in the book fit with those in the correspondence and bills and receipts of Brown Leftwich and Co. in the Clayton-Brown-Leftwich Papers.

This collection centers on a copy of a speech given by General Cleburne to the regimental commanders and general officers of the Army of the Tennessee on January 2, 1864. The copy was requested from Cleburne by General W. H. T. Walker to be forwarded to Jefferson Davis. Walker considered the address inflammatory and likely to result in "ruin" and "disgrace." The document itself, signed by Cleburne, is his famous suggestion that the Confederacy, by that time in dire circumstances, should free the slaves and muster them into the Cleburne outlined the main reasons this would be beneficial: 1) the wind would be knocked out of Yankee moral zeal, 2) foreign countries would be morally free to give substantial aid to the South, 3) the actual size of the Army would be greatly augmented, and 4) the black population of the South would no longer constitute a threat as spies for the enemy.

This collection consists of two letters written by a Union sailor on the U. S. Steamer Maratanza near Wilmington, N. C. , to his parents. In the first letter, dated Dec. 29, 1864, the sailor writes of the unsuccessful attack on Fort Fisher due to the small number of soldiers and sailors participating in this attack which commenced on Christmas Eve. The sailor, in the second letter, dated Jan. 17, 1865, relates the news of the successful attack, by both land and naval forces, on Fort Fisher, which contained eight-five guns and about two thousand prisoners. This victory was described as "the greatest victory that has been gained since the war."

Clegg, William F. Papers. Chatham County,
North Carolina

The Reverend William F. Clegg (1827-1875), a Methodist minister, was born and died at his home near Pittsboro in Chatham County. Biographical information may be found in his obituary in the annual conference minutes of December 6, 1875, of the North Carolina Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

This volume was originally cataloged as part of the Methodist Church Papers under the title

Clegg, William F.

of "N. C. Conference Collection Book, 1871."

It is actually a Class Book for the Trent and Deep River circuits. The inclusion of records from both circuits is explained by the fact that William F. Clegg served the Trent Circuit in 1870-1871 (and earlier) and the Deep River Circuit in 1871-1872. The only date appearing in the volume is 1871, but his appointment to the Deep River Circuit was in December, 1871. Therefore, the records from the latter circuit date at least into 1872.

Clegg, William F.

The Deep River Circuit included churches in at least Chatham and Moore counties. The Trent River Circuit was in Carteret County and possibly elsewhere.

Clemens, Cyril. Papers, 1930-1961. Webster Groves, St. Louis Co., Missouri. Sketch.

Cyril Clemens, a cousin of Samuel Langhorne Clemens (Mark Twain) served long as the editor of the Mark Twain Quarterly. He wrote a number of books and articles on literary and political figures, Mark Twain being a primary subject of his efforts.

This collection has part of the correspondence of Clemens and George Santayana (1863-1952), poet, novelist, and philosopher. There are fifty-four letters from Santayana to Clemens from 1930 to 1952, a number of clippings

Clemens, Cyril.

about Santayana's works, and the manuscript and galley proof of his article, "Tom Sawyer and Don Quixote." There is also a reprint, Brief History of My Opinions, a chapter from Contemporary American Philosophy, Personal Statements, edited by George P. Adams and William P. Montague. Letters from Clemens are absent, but there are a proof of his article, "An American Philosopher in Exile, George Santayana," and a typed copy of his booklet, George Santayana: An American in Exile. Both items have corrections by Santayana. Also included are occasional explanatory notes by Clemens on various items and several miscellaneous letters to him.

Clemens, Cyril.

All of Santayana's letters are dated from Italy, usually from Rome. These items are mainly responses to specific comments or ideas from Clemens, but Santayana frequently illuminates them with opinions and reflections. His letters are easily legible and often entertaining.

There are twelve letters from Jan. 21, 1930, to the outbreak of the Second World War in 1939. On Dec. 2, 1937, Santayana notes that his novel,

Clemens, Cyril.

4

The Last Puritan, seems to interest mainly the northern nations such as Germany, Sweden, and Denmark where translations have appeared, no other translations being available. This work seems to be regarded more as sociology than as an artistic creation. On Christmas Day, 1938, he is at work on what he supposes will be his last volume of formal philosophy, The Realm of the Spirit. In 1936 (Dec. 18) he comments on the two occasions on which he met Alfred Edward Housman, English poet, and gives his reaction to Housman's poetry. The writings of Gilbert

Clemens, Cyril.

Keith Chesterton he finds "too crisp," and those of Edward Arlington Robinson "too dull." They left him "empty," he writes, as does all contemporary poetry (Dec. 2, 1937). Clemens praises The Last Puritan, and for this, or possibly some other work, offers Santayana the Mark Twain Medal, Clemens being president of the International Mark Twain Society as well as editor of the Mark Twain Quarterly. Santayana raises some objections but eventually receives the medal (March 26, 1936- Aug. 11, 1937).

Eight letters date from the war years while

Clemens, Cyril.

6

Santayana remains in Italy, though he is occasionally away from Rome. In late 1939 he is at Venice, where he says he may remain if he does not winter somewhere that has an easier climate. Florence and other Anglo-American centers he avoids (Sept. 23, Nov. 14, 1939). In 1941 money is still available from a nephew in Boston who manages it for him, but the war may interfere with this income. If so he may go to Switzerland despite his dread of a winter there, the past season having been hard on him. Santayana is still a Spanish citizen with a Spanish passport. He hopes, however, to stay in Italy unless lack of funds forces him to leave for Spain or Switzerland (July 24, 1941). There is no correspondence for 1942-1943, but in 1944 (Oct. 10) he reports good health and steady work despite a reduced diet that war has necessitated. He is ~~now~~ agreeably situated at a convent in Rome where he will live until his death in 1952.

Clemens, Cyril.

Despite the war Santayana continues to write. His Realms of Being is now complete, and he proposes to write recollections of his life and friends (Nov. 14, Dec. 14, 1939). By May 16, 1941, Santayana is spending his mornings at work on what becomes Persons and Places, the third volume of which he wants to leave unpublished during his life. The Idea of Christ in the Gospels is now in the process of being published. A reading of Chesterton's St. Thomas Aquinas has improved his opinion of that English author (Aug. 17, 1945).

Clemens, Cyril.

There are thirty-one letters from 1946 to within a few months of Santayana's death in 1952. One of the few remarks on contemporary politics is in a letter of March 20, 1946. He avers that universal peace "is not a question of votes or meetings or public opinion, but of the force that will impose any decisions that may be agreed upon verbally." At this time political literature becomes one of his primary reading interests, with Plato, Aristotle, Toynbee, Laswell, and John Wild's works being on his list (Dec. 6, 1946, June 9, 1947). Regarding literature and aesthetics he detects a certain disgust in the contemporary attitude, one which he welcomes as a return to realism (May 10, 1947). Santayana receives a book of verse from Robert Traill Spence Lowell Jr. (1917-) that impresses him and also surprises him as a work from contemporary America. Certain aspects of Lowell's life dampen Santayana's regard for his wisdom, but he still considers the poet an important figure and one who still arouses his curiosity (Aug. 13, Nov. 5, Dec. 23, 1947). The letter of Dec. 23 has an interesting remark by Santayana on his Catholicism.

Clemens, Cyril.

During 1946-1949 Santayana's correspondence with Clemens proceeds as usual with the exception that his remonstrances with the American editor are more frequent. Santayana thanks him for the dedication of an edition of the Mark Twain Quarterly, but chides him about his critical appreciations. Apparently some rumor of a Nobel Prize was circulating, for Santayana raises objections and asks Clemens to desist if he is responsible. Clemens also entertained an idea of writing a biography of Santayana who sternly resists the proposal (June 30, Aug. 11, 1946; July 17, Nov. 12, 1948; Jan. 21, Feb. 21, Apr. 9, Nov. 22, 1949).

Clemens, Cyril.

11

During the last few years of Santayana's life he remains busy with literary interests. On June 9, 1948, he is concentrating on a final book, but he is only able to work on it for two or three hours a day. Reading occupies most of his other working time. He declines to write a foreward for a book on Mark Twain, as he has never read any of Twain's works. Dominations and Powers, his "funeral oration," is now being published (Dec. 8, 1950). Despite earlier aversion or indifference Santayana begins to read Huckleberry Finn and Tom Sawyer and decides to write an article on the relationship of these characters to Don Quixote. This article Clemens publishes in the winter edition, 1952, of the quarterly. The manuscript, galley proof, and a typed copy with corrections of the article, "Tom Sawyer and Don Quixote," are in this collection.

In the last few letters there are hints of ill health. The winter of 1950-51 is uncomfortable for Santayana, and he is not well in Aug., 1951. In Feb., 1952, he has chronic catarrh and a case of influenza (June 15, Aug. 15, 1951;

Clemens, Cyril.

Feb. 24, 1952). The last item, June 2, 1952, is a short philosophical letter.

During the period 1930-1952, Clemens habitually sends Santayana books, articles, and clippings which generally are related to the philosopher's works. Clemens usually requests the return of these clippings and many of them are attached to letters in which Santayana returns them with his comments.

On March 2, 1932, Santayana returns a corrected typed copy of Clemen's article, "An American Philosopher in Exile, George Santayana," which is in the fall, 1936, edition of the Mark Twain Quarterly. He comments favorably on this imaginary interview and marks several changes. Clemens and his wife meet Santayana in Rome during Oct., 1930 (Oct. 28, 1930). Clemens later publishes this article as a booklet in 1937 as George Santayana: An American in Exile. A page-proof of this booklet with Santayana's corrections accompanies his letter of Feb. 22, 1937. On this occasion Santayana complains that Clemens deviates from what the philosopher considers an accurate account. A letter of

Dec. 25, 1938, has further criticism that apparently is related to the above articles.

On Aug. 11, 1937, Santayana criticizes a new book by Van Meter Ames, Proust and Santayana: the Aesthetic Way of Life. He calls Ames' discussion about him inaccurate and insufficiently serious. It was written, Santayana writes, by Ames' wife after a visit with him.

Santayana's reaction to a biography by George Washburne Howgate is considerably more favorable. Howgate's work, George Santayana, appeared in 1938. On Apr. 7, 1939, the philosopher gives a short appraisal, both critical and appreciative, of this volume. He discusses it again on June 30, 1946, as he looks back on what has now become a premature biography as far as his later publications are concerned. Several years later (Feb. 21, 1949) Santayana again notes Howgate's book. The facts are accurate, he comments, but the biography is not a profound one. Howgate consulted Santayana when writing his biography. On Jan. 10, 1950, he recommends Howgate's volume along with several other ones for biographical information.

Several clippings, reviews of Santayana's works, accompany letters in which he comments on them. There are three reviews of Dominations and Powers— one from Time (letter of May 11, 1951), Newsweek (June 5, 1951, and The Saturday Review (June 15, 1951). Note also a review and an article with letters of Dec. 31, 1950, and June 2, 1952.

In the American Mercury of Jan., 1952, is an article, "Sex and Santayana," that casts aspersions on the philosopher's personality.

Clemens, Cyril.

Santayana remembers meeting the author, Max Forrester Eastman, and refers to him as unscrupulous with his facts and impertinent with his inferences. He returns the article to Clemens on May 10, 1952.

Four miscellaneous letters to Clemens relate somewhat to Santayana. They are from Daniel Cory, Santayana's literary executor, and from three American authors — Corliss Lamont, John Hall Wheelock, and John Gould Fletcher (Nov. 20, March 7, Oct. 2, 1952; July 13, 1942). Cory sends the manuscript of "Tom Sawyer and and Don Quixote" to Clemens soon after Santayana's death. John Gould Fletcher, American author, discusses Howgate's essay about Santayana and Mark Twain and the contrasts and parallels between these two writers. Fletcher also promises Clemens an article on Alfred E. Housman, and he comments about Housman and the poet's biographer, Franklin Thomas Grant Richards.

Several clippings are placed at the end of the correspondence. A photograph of Santayana, one sent by him to Clemens, was transferred to the Picture File.

CLEMENT, John Marshall. Letters. 1830-1872.
Mocksville, North Carolina. 24 pieces. Sketch

This collection, in general, contains some of the correspondence of John Marshall Clement. The letters are chiefly from members of the family when they were away at school in Greensboro, N.C. and Gettysburg, Pa. John Marshall Clement, son of John Clement, was born in Davie Co., N.C., on Nov. 1, 1825. He was educated in Clegg's School, the Mocksville Academy, and Pennsylvania College at Gettysburg, Pa., where he graduated in 1846. In 1853 he married Mary Jane Hayden. Of this union there were ten children.

CLEMENT, John Marshall. Sketch. (2)

John Marshall Clement served one term in the Legislature of N.C. During the remainder of his life he practiced law very successfully, frequently arguing cases before the N.C. Supreme Court and the federal court. He was a brilliant speaker. His son, Louis Henry Clement, was also a prominent lawyer, at one time being solicitor of the Ninth Judicial District of N.C. John Marshall Clement died on June 4, 1886.

The school near Mocksville of Mr. Clegg is apparently the Mocksville Academy (letters of Nov. 30, 1845, and July 20, 1846). The education committees of the North Carolina Conference of the Methodist Church reported the Rev. Baxter Clegg as supervisor of the Mocksville Academy in the early 1840's. See their reports in the conference's manuscript journals: Dec. 29, 1840; Nov. 3, 1841; Nov. 1, 1842; and Dec. 10, 1844.

Biographical information about Clement is in Clyde B. Stover and Charles W. Beachem, The Alumni Record of Gettysburg College 1832-1932 (Gettysburg, 1932), p. 17.

Other topics in this collection are: the

Vince Clemente, educator and editor, lives on Long Island and is a Professor of English at Suffolk Community College. Together with Edward Joyce and James Mattimore he founded the Long Pond Review, a monthly journal to provide a media for the works of Long Islanders on the theme of Long Island. The January 1976 issue featured John Hall Wheelock whose summer home for ninety years of his life had been on Long Island. Many of his poems reflect his joy in and love for the place.

The Clemente papers are about John Hall Wheelock. They consist of 13 letters from Wheelock, 2 letters from Mrs. Wheelock, 3 letters from Jay B. Hubbell pertaining to the publication of the special issue of Long Pond Review featuring Wheelock, a letter from Allen Tate, 3 letters from May Swenson, poet, and one from Harrison Salisbury, publisher of the New York Times. At the time of Wheelock's death, Clemente wrote a poem about it and sent a copy to Mrs. Wheelock. A copy of this poem is in the papers along with a videotape of an Clemm, Elizabeth C. Papers. Baltimore, Md.

Two of the three letters comprising this collection were written to Elizabeth C. Clemm by her mother from London. The letters are travelogues that include descriptions of what she and her party are seeing and experiencing. Her comments include her view of the British, impression of Nicolò Paganini, one of whose concerts she attended, and a detailed description of a flea circus. It appears that the young lady Sophia in her party was perhaps her daughter and that she may have been seeking a

Thomas Green Clemson was born in Philadelphia, July 1, 1807. He was especially interested in chemistry and went to Paris in 1826 for further study at the Sorbonne. In 1838, he married Anna Maria, the eldest daughter of John C. Calhoun, and became associated with Calhoun in agriculture and gold mining. In 1844 he was appointed charge d'affaires in Belguim where he negotiated some important treaties and attempted to direct cotton imports from the U.S. through

In 1856, he was instrumental in the establishment of the Maryland Agricultural College. After serving since 1859 as superintendent of agriculture, he resigned in 1861 when his southern sentiments forced him to return to S.C. He served in various capacities in the Confederate government and then spent the remainder of his life attempting to raise funds for the establishment of a scientific college in South Carolina. Upon his death in 1888, he bequeathed the bulk of his estate to the state to form the basis of Clemson College.

Among the four items comprising this collection are an agreement between Clemson and his overseer Reuben H. Reynolds (Dec. 29, 1848) and a financial statement (1849). In a letter of Nov. 30, 1865, he introduced James Edward Calhoun to Max Van den Bergh, vice-consul of the U.S. at Antwerp. After commenting on Calhoun's career, he noted that the emancipation of slave labor would create a situation favorable to large scale emigration to the South of

On Sept. 2, 1870, Anna Clemson wrote concerning the settlement of her family's estate. This letter was probably written to Armistead Burt who handled the Clemson legal matters. Other letters to him were transferred to the Burt papers when the Clemson collection was recataloged.

Rockingham Co., Va. 30 items. Sketch

This collection consists of twelve personal letters, eleven of them from three Confederate soldiers, Jacob B. Click, Lucius C. [or A.?] Haney, and James F. Ward. One of the eleven letters is from Click to Haney. Two are from Haney to his sister, Miss Evaline [?] G. [?] Haney, who receives five from Click and one from Ward. Two are from Ward to Violey [?] E. Haney. John D. Rallew [?], who is not a soldier, writes one letter to Miss M. C. Haney.

The chief subjects discussed are the Civil Nathan Clifford (1803-1881), congressman and judge, was born in Rumney, New Hampshire, and educated at Hampton College. His political career began in 1830, when he became a member of the Maine Legislature where he served as Speaker from 1832 to 1834. In that year Clifford was appointed Attorney General of Maine, which gave him experience for his term of office as Attorney General of the and Thos. Wright. Copies of marriage licenses include those of: Joseph Darden and Elizabeth Stevens, Jethro Oates and Nancy Bradshaw, Solomon Barfield and Mary Ann Hood, Benajah G. Carr and P.J. Carr.

Other miscellaneous items are an ordination certificate (1835) for John L. Clifton to preach in the Free Will Baptist church; papers in the suit of John L. Clifton vs. Francis Westbrook and John Atkinson; powers of attorney; list of pupils at the Everettville school on Aug 8, 1849; letter of Oct. 1849 to the Bethel

Conference and Union Meeting of the Disciples of Christ telling the number of recent converts, both white and black, in one church; permit for a slave to travel and accept employment as a carpenter in Duplin, Sampson, and Wayne counties; account of the death of Julius Hardy Clifton, son of John L. Clifton; family correspondence; a circular letter of 1882 from dealers in guano in Petersburg, Va.; and an obituary of Joseph Whitley Darden.

The family correspondence contains Civil War letters of Clifton's sons, H. J. and F. A. while they were serving in S.C. and Va.. Their letters describe the Battle of Fort Sumter (1861), mention a namesake of Jefferson Davis, the pay of officers in the Confederate Army, food, cost of uniforms, fortifications at Georgetown and the amount of rice produced in that district, the impressment of Negroes in 1863 to build fortifications below Wilmington, and describe a retreat from Fredericksburg to Richmond, preparations for fighting at the latter place, and the Siege of Charleston in 1863.

The volumes include daybooks and ledgers of John L. Clifton, Wm. S. Clinton, and James A. Tillman and two copybooks of pupils. Tillman was a physician, and his daybook contains a record of his practice from 1852 to 1857.

Two oversize genealogical charts delineate the King family of Bertie and Sampson counties, N.C., and related families, including the Cliftons, in N.C. and elsewhere.

Cline was born in Montgomery County, North Carolina, in 1905. His father, William Josiah Cline, farmed in different counties of the state including Stanly, Montgomery and Cabarrus counties. Cline attended high school one year at Catawba Academy (forerunner of Catawba College in Salisbury), Newton, North Carolina, in 1923 and Palmerville High School in Stanly County, 1924-1926. Cline entered Duke University in 1926, where he graduated in 1930. Upon graduation he taught in several North Carolina public schools, 1930-1933. In 1934, he entered the Civilian Conservation Corps where he remained until 1942. From 1942 to 1954, he taught agricultural education to high school students and to veterans in North and South Carolina. He farmed and worked for Norman Lowder a large poultry producer in the Rowan County area, 1954-1970.

The collection consists of one volume of

Cline, Mack Ivey

of Cline's reminiscences, dated June, 1981. The volume is written in a chatty style, and in the foreward Cline writes that it is "written almost entirely from memory." For the most part the events are told in chronological order, although this is not always the case.

Cline describes in some detail his mother's (the Reeves) and father's (the Clines) families. He not only lists his mother's and father's siblings but he also places them in historical perspective. Of particular interest are

Cline's descriptions of his early educational training, several of his professors at Duke and his experiences as a teacher.

He discusses at length his time in the Civilian Conservation Corps (CCC), 1934-1942. He describes the enrollees, living conditions in the various camps where he was located, his various duties and the organization of the CCC. While in the CCC, he was stationed at Topton and Aquone, N. C. (1934); Switzer, S. C. (1935); Paris Mountain, S. C. (1936-1939);

Vilas, Fla. (July 1940); and Clemson, S. C. (Nov. 1940 - June 1942). During the time he was stationed in S. C., he took several summer courses at Clemson College (later Clemson University) in poultry, beekeeping, hog production, woodworking, carpentry, forge and foundry. He was able to use the knowledge he gained to teach the CCC enrollees and for his own benefit in the poultry business.

The appendix includes a photocopy of a letter (June 7, 1864) to Cline's grandmother,

Cline, Mack Ivey

Margaret Elizabeth Hall, who married George Alexander (Sandy) Cline, from Margret Cline, Sandy's mother. She is writing after she heard about Sandy's rumored death in the Civil War campaign in the Wilderness.

Also in the appendix are photocopies of pictures of the Cline family and genealogies of the Cline, Sills and Reeves families. Sills was the family name of William Josiah Cline's first wife.

Clodd, Edward. Papers. London, England.

Edward Clodd (1840-1930) was a British banker and author.

Several letters concern the Society of Authors and Sir Walter Besant, the novelist who was its chairman. Besant wrote on June 22, 1891, on the Society's stationery and gave Clodd some advice about changing his publisher. During Dec. 21-25, 1892, Dean Frederic W. Farrar, Sir Edwin Ray Lankester, and authors Ada Bayly and Hesba Stretton sent contributions for a testimonial for Besant. Farrar praised

Besant, and Stretton complimented the Society's work that she thought would make easier the paths of writers in the future.

Clodd sent books and autograph letters to "Amy" (Nov. 9, 1883, and Jan. 29, 1893).

There is a personal letter of 1890 from David Edward Hughes, the inventor.

In a personal note dated only Oct. 11, Moncure Daniel Conway noted sending a letter to The Nation about "The Omar Khayyám Cult in England."

In an undated letter, Clement Shorter,

Clode, Charles Mathew. Papers, 1862-1882.
London, England.

Charles Mathew Clode (1818-1893) of London was successively an attorney and solicitor for the city of London (1839-1858), solicitor to the War Office (1858-1876), and legal secretary at the War Office (1876-1880). He was pensioned in 1880. Clode was the author of several works on military law and administration. A biographical sketch of him appears in Frederic Boase, Modern English Biography (Truro, 1908), IV, 691.

Clode, Charles Mathew

On March 26, 1868, Lord Hartington, later the Eighth Duke of Devonshire, informs Clode that his offer of additional evidence cannot be utilized. The committee's report is already in the drafting stage. Hartington is in the House of Commons. His only identification of the committee is that Lord Cranborne is its chairman.

On Oct. 7, 1875, Spencer Horatio Walpole sends Clode documents from which the Militia Act of 1852 was primarily framed. Clode's interest in these papers may relate to his work of 1875, The Militia - Voluntary Enlistment Act, 1875. Clode also published other works on military statutes in the late 1870's.

A letter from the Second Viscount Hardinge, dated only Nov. 8, refers also to the Militia Act of 1852. Hardinge comments on Wellington's rejection then of a reserve of three years' service. When Hardinge writes, the military has both the reserve and the militia, the utility of which he comments upon. Hardinge states what he considers to be the weaknesses of the militia and volunteer force as they are now constituted. Letter possibly dates in 1875.

A letter of Earl Grey, December 8, 1875, may also have been addressed to Clode. The content resembles the above letters to Clode, that came with the same miscellaneous accession of manuscripts. Gray also asks the addressee to give a message to Mr. Hardy, who was Secretary of State for War. Grey notes his long standing opposition to compulsory

Clopton, John. Papers. New Kent Co., and Manchester, Chesterfield Co., Va.

Though labelled as the Clopton collection, this set of manuscripts derives its chief value from the papers of the Wallace family, especially the letters of Charles Montriau Wallace, Sr. These two families were united by the marriage of Joyce Wilkinson Clopton to Charles Montriau Wallace, Sr. in 1863. She was the granddaughter of John Clopton, a U.S. representative from Virginia, 1795-99, and 1801-1816, and a daughter of Judge John

Clopton, John.

Bacon Clopton of New Kent county, Virginia, while Charles Montrion~~h~~ Wallace, Sr. was the son of William Manson Wallace, Sr., a well known merchant of Richmond, Va. As a result, both the Clopton and Wallace papers are in this collection, including correspondence of four generations of Cloptons and three generations of Wallaces. The Clopton papers, properly speaking, begin in 1732 although there are genealogical records dating back to 1629; the Wallace papers

Clopton, John.

begin about 1831. In general the early Clopton material, letters of John Clopton(1756-1816) are valuable and the papers of Charles Wallace from 1848 to around 1870 are exceedingly valuable as reflections of his trip to California, trade during the Confederacy in Nassau and Eng., accounts of England and France in 1865 and opinions on the deep South during reconstruction. Wallace was also a writer of decided literary ability which gives a peculiar value to his letters. There are also many interesting letters written from Scotland and England by the Wallace relatives who were people of education.

Clopton, John.

The Clopton family was of English origin; the first emigrant to America was William Clopton who married Anne Booth; their son, William also, married Joyce Wilkinson and in turn had a son, William who married Elizabeth Darrell Ford and it is with this William whose life span was from 1720-1796 that the collection really begins. In the early days the family had settled in Hanover county, Va., but the family either moved or their holdings became incorporated in New Kent county at its formation.

Clopton, John.

John Clopton, the son of William Clopton and Elizabeth Darrall Ford, was educated at the Univ. of Pennsylvania from 1774 to 1776. He married Sarah Bacon, supposedly a descendant of Nathaniel Bacon and the following children were born of the union: William Izard, John Bacon, Sarah

Clopton, John.

Ann and Marie Louise Adelaide Milliotte St. de la Croix Gernon.

Some of John Clopton's letters were written as a school boy to his father from 1774 to 1776 filled with interesting references to the Revolutionary War and Continental Congress. Later from 1795 to 1816 with the exception of one term John Clopton served as United States ^{representative} ~~senator~~. During this latter period there are many letters to his son, John Bacon Clopton; in most instances

Clopton, John.

these letters are personal but there are many political comments on congressional affairs. There are also many contemporary copies of political letters which John Clopton wrote to various of his constituents. His comments are on such items as the Jay Treaty, Alien and Sedition Acts, the Embargo Act and the general situation regarding France. These letters reveal Clopton's devotion to Jeffersonian republicanism. Two letters from Clopton to his son, John Bacon Clopton

Clopton, John.

dated December 30 and 31, 1808, discuss the possibility of a slave insurrection. John Clopton was a candidate in the most stirring congressional election ever held in Virginia when John Marshall defeated him by 108 votes. Marshall ran at George Washington's request.

John Bacon Clopton, next in the direct Clopton line, married Maria Gaitskill Foster of which union were born nine children: John, Walter, Francis, Namu, (all of whom evidently died young)

Sarah Jane, William Izard, Adelaide, Katherine and Joyce, who married Charles Montriau Wallace, Sr. John Bacon Clopton began as a lawyer and later became a judge. His papers range from 1816 to the 1830's; most of them were personal and business letters.

The remainder of the Clopton papers are chiefly family letters. However, there are many letters of William Izard Clopton to his mother written while he was in the Confederate army as well as many letters written to and by Maria (Foster) Clopton, Adelaide and Katherine Clopton, and Joyce (Clopton) Wallace.

Charles Montriau Wallace, Sr. (who married Joyce Wilkinson Wallace, daughter of John Bacon Clopton) was the sixth child of William Manson Wallace, Sr. and Catherine Leighey of Pennsylvania. The Wallaces originated in Cruden parish, Aberdeenshire, Scotland. William Manson Wallace, Sr. came to America about 1815. He spent a few years in Pennsylvania before settling in Richmond as a merchant dealing in wine, liquors, and groceries. He developed a large trade with the region west of Richmond. In addition to Charles Montriau there were several other children who reached maturity: Isobel Manson, William Manson, Jefferson (1823-1864), Katherine, Gustavus, Charlotte, Barbara and Juliet.

Charles Montriau Wallace (1825-1910) was widely travelled and adventurous, at the same time possessing decided literary ability. He went to California by the overland route. He had all the adventures of the proverbial forty-niner, digging for gold, selling supplies to prospectors, and later becoming a rancher. His brothers, Jefferson and William Manson, Jr., later joined him in Mariposa county, California going by way of Panama at Charles' advice. Soon after their father's death in 1854 they all returned to Richmond and formed a partnership in merchandising known as Wm. Wallace Sons which also included Gustavus Wallace. This firm was very prosperous at the outbreak of the Civil War with a branch house in New York. During the war the firm was composed of Charles and Jefferson Wallace. They dealt in cotton in the deep South and by 1865 were given a secret commission by the Confederate government along with Crenshaw & Co. of Richmond. Charles Wallace, on this mission, ran the blockade to Nassau. He was in Eng.

Clopton, John.

(12)

Clopton, John.

Clopton, John.

when the war closed. After some time he returned to America, and travelled over the South in an effort to save his cotton. By 1870 he settled permanently in Richmond and devoted the remainder of his life to literary pursuits particularly book collecting. At one time he had a remarkable collection of history books. His papers have many references to historical research. As a whole his letters from California, Nassau, Eng. Paris, the far South, New York and New Orleans give excellent accounts of interesting points and contemporary events.

Jefferson Wallace, brother and partner of Charles Montriau Wallace, wrote many letters from Chapes, Panama City, and California. He was sent on a secret mission for the Confederate government to Bermuda. He died of yellow fever in 1864. His letters from St. George, Bermuda, are very colorful.

William Manson Wallace, Jr. joined the United States Navy about 1845 and many of his letters give accounts comparable to those of Dana's in Two Years Before the Mast.

Despite the excellence of this collection there is not a great amount devoted to any one period. John Clopton's correspondence while in Congress from 1797-1816 and the California letters from 1849 to 1856 are two of the best sections. There is a considerable amount of material on the activities of the Crenshaw Company

Clopton, John.

during the Civil War.

For further information see the sketch on the Clopton family from the Richmond Times Dispatch and the ms. Sketch of the Wallace Family in the box labelled Genealogy.

24 items added 2-29-49. Notes on an Indian tribe, sketches and descriptions of flints discovered at Manakin, Va.; daybook; letter from Robert B. Kegerreis to a Mr. Wallace inquiring as to his knowledge of Edgar Allan Poe; copy(over) of a "note" found by Kegerreis on a flyleaf of a copy of "Edgar Poe and His Critics" which a Mr. Wallace had once owned. This "note" tells of Wallace's meeting Poe at a drinking place, repeats the report that Poe considered Eureka his greatest work, and gives Wallace's opinion of Poe's intellect and style. Letters from Jefferson Wallace to his father and two broadsides: "Confederate Notes Wanted" and another advertisement by the Mercer Curiosity Shop of

Cincinnati, advertising for old silver money, books, autographs, etc. and listing for sale "10,000 Curiosities."

A daybook, 1860-1865, belonged to William Wallace & Sons, grocers and commission merchants of Richmond, Virginia. The volume also includes a ledger, 1867. At that time, William Wallace was dead (f. 30), and Charles M. Wallace was the surviving partner (f. 28).

Charles Wallace at an undetermined date wrote in the back of this daybook a sketch of the early settlements at Richmond, ending with an exposition on the site of Powhatan's village. His narrative begins with the settlements of Baldwin Rockett (d. 1730) and his family and then continues with comments on Gillie Gromarrin, whose land grant is dated 1690. This name became Marrin in the early eighteenth century.

Clopton, John

19a

605 items added, 9-14-50: Indentures, receipts, bills, poem by Bernard M. Carter; bulletin announcing the organization of the D. A. A. in 1890; letters to Jefferson Wallace regarding the publishing business, mainly in connection with Wallace's Illustrated Weekly; resolutions upon the death of Margaret Jefferson

Clopton, John

19b

8 items added 11-26-51. These are mainly letters about financial and personal matters from Jos. Jackson, Jr. to Mrs. Sarah J. Pulliam.

15 items and 5 vols. added 7-8-52. These include a letter of Jan. 6, 1813 from Maria Clopton to her brother John B. at Richmond. She speaks of her and her parents attending social functions at the French Minister's, at Mr. Gallatin's, and at the White House. She was accompanied to a ball at the French Legation by a Mrs. Monroe. There are letters of 1891 to

Wallace from Frank M. Beverly, Frank A. Munsey, Thos. Nelson Page, Geo. Washington Ball, and Lyon G. Tyler which, for the most part, deal with the publication of and subscriptions to Wallace's magazine. One letter from Frank Munsey says that he will not be able to place Wallace on his staff.

The five vols. consist of an account book of the estate of John Clopton from 1816 to 1819, a legal case book (1820), which probably belonged to Judge John Bacon Clopton and which contains lists of cases tried in the courts of Henrico, Chesterfield, and Charles City counties and other miscellany; a volume containing minutes, 1830-1831, of the Black Creek Temperance Society in Hanover Co. of which William E. Clopton was president and also including personal accounts, 1834-1853, of Judge John Bacon Clopton (1834-1835) and of at least five Clopton girls; two financial record books of Adelaide Clopton, a teacher, each one of which contains lists of students and one contains minutes and the constitution of a literary society at Chesapeake Female College. It appears that Miss

22a

Clopton was teaching in Richmond, and the financial records of her school run from 1861-1863.

The formation of the Keecoughton Literary Society at the Chesapeake Female College is recorded in the first pages of the Adelaide Clopton Commonplace Book, 1857-1887, one of the volumes noted in the preceding paragraph. At the back of the volume is the constitution and bylaws of this society. Keecoughton (or Kicoughton) was the Indian name for Hampton.

The following comment about the Chesapeake Female Academy appears in Lyon G. Tyler, History of Hampton and Elizabeth City County Virginia (Hampton, Virginia, 1922), p. 50:

Clopton, John

22c

Still another school advanced the educational condition of the county. In 1854, Rev. Martin Forey, a Baptist minister, erected near Hampton the Chesapeake Female College, which in 1859 appears to have been converted into a boy's school.

On August 2, 1857, Adelaide Clopton commented on her negotiations with the college's officials. Miss Clopton assumed duties at the college in the fall of 1857 (letter of October, 1857, to Adelaide Clopton). Other letters in the Clop-

1682 items and 6 vols added 1-30-54. This

addition involves almost entirely the family of Charles M. Wallace (1825-1910). The 298 letters are the main interest of the collection; these are primarily family letters written among the Wallaces and to them by their many relatives.

There are letters and bills around 1870 regarding Mr. Wallace's avocation of book collecting. A lengthy MS. article by Arthur Hodgson tells of "Clopton and the Cloptons"; evidently "Clopton" was the ancestral home in England. Some of the very interesting personal letters are from Charles Wallace's sons, Jefferson

(1864- ?) and Charles, Jr. One letter from the latter tells of a visit to New York City in 1887. Other letters tell of various experiences and travels. A lengthy letter by Charles M. Wallace on November 2, 1887 concerns Richmond and Virginia politics and politicians, and European political troubles; it is written from the point of view of the aristocrat looking down on the peasant and the working man. He is especially critical of the education of the latter classes. Letters from Charles M. Wallace to his wife

Joyce tell of many interests: books he is reading, including works by Cervantes, Tolstoy, and Macaulay; national politics, etc. In 1905, Charles, Jr., a lawyer, was interested in manganese mining in Virginia. Various family letters include some genealogical material on the Wallace and Clopton families. There is a letter of Jan. 31, 1885 from the Women's Silk Culture Association which answers a number of questions regarding the cultivation of silk in the U. S. at that time.

The six volumes include the following: Five MS. volumes giving an unpublished account of Charles M. Wallace's overland trip to California and his experiences there in the 1840's and 1850's; these are written on checkbooks of the Bank of Virginia, some used and some not. There is a MS. volume of The Art of Extemporaneous Speaking and other writings by Charles M. Wallace, Jr., and there are daybooks, memorandum books, a copybook, record kept by Sarah J. Pulliam as administratrix of the estate of D. M.

Clopton, John

Pulliam, a printed guide to the Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia in 1876, and a combination journal of a trip to Texas and memorandum book. On p. 27 of the latter vol. there is a bit of information about Geo. Washington as related by Peter M. Morgan, who remembered Washington.

Added 5-13-54 is a legal case book, 1820.

1 vol. added 4-25-56. This volume starts off with a journal of a trip of Chas. M. Wallace, Sr. to England in 1865, but after a few pages that journal ends.

He set sail on a blockade runner on Jan. 27 by way of the Bahamas and Bermuda for Liverpool. Once he reached England he described much of what he saw there. On May 5 he recorded that Lincoln had been assassinated and went on to say that he was sorry and the killing of Lincoln could not benefit the South.

Most of the volume consists of an account of a large part of his trip from Va. to Calif. in 1849. He went by way of Pittsburgh and the Ohio and Mississippi rivers to La. There he took a boat for some distance up the Red River and then started overland for Calif. On p. 42 he comments on Cincinnati; and on p. 42 on the retaliatory laws of the Choctaws. On p. 46 he tells of seeing Gen. Sam Houston in a village in La., and on pp. 51-63 tells of meeting him in Texas. He characterizes Houston and digresses on his role in the movement for Texas independence. On p. 69 he says he thinks Daniel Boone and Kit Carson were inferior to many a frontiersman who is unknown to the "reading world." While passing through Texas he describes the landscape and wildlife, certain traits and practices of some of the Indians, including the Apaches, the way of life among the white settlers, his encounter with Mormons at Fredericksburg, Tex., and hardships he and other members of his company suffered along the route.

11 items added 3-16-57, include one letter of Mar. 17, 1884, by Chas. M. Wallace, Sr., which is autobiographical and discusses religion. There are letters to Congressman Charles M. Wallace, Jr., from Virginia, Congressmen John Lamb, Francis Rives Lassiter, John F. Rixey, and John H. Rogers, giving a few biographical facts and casual comments on local Virginia politics and government.

1 item added 4-29-58. Passport of Jefferson Wallace, granted by Judah P. Benjamin, July 15, 1863. On the reverse is a permit by command of Major Whiting to allow Wallace to leave the port of Wilmington on the state steamer "Advance," July 18, 1863.

1 item 5-14-58: Letter of 1803, concerning a bill just passed in Congress.

123 items and 1 volume added, 9-4-63: Primarily personal and business correspondence of Jefferson Wallace (b. 1864), the son of Joyce

Wilkinson (Clopton) and Charles Montriau Wallace, Sr. For most of his life Jefferson was connected with the printing, publishing, fertilizer, and insurance businesses. He published the Baton, the Critic, and Wallace's Illustrated Weekly, and then worked for James G. Tinsley & Company, which became the Virginia-Carolina Chemical Company in 1895. Various life insurance companies employed him. Eventually Jefferson formed the Independent Chemical Company, of which he was president. Mr. Wallace was very active in Virginia politics and made an unsuccessful bid for Congress in 1902. In 1906 he married Anne Hawthorne, a teacher. For further biographical information, see the pamphlet, "For Congress" (1902) in this collection.

The majority of the personal letters were written by Jefferson's mother in 1906 and reveal the poverty of the family at that time. Business correspondence, 1903-1908, relates to fertilizer and life insurance sales. The miscellaneous items include notes (1887), an article (1906), and a volume of writings by Charles Montriou Wallace, Sr. and material concerning the fertilizer business.

2 items transferred from John M. Kell MSS., 1-27-64. On May 22, 1866, James D. B. DeBow, editor of DeBow's Review in Nashville, advises Miss Kate Clopton to negotiate with Dr. C. D. Elliott, president of the Nashville Female Academy, for a teaching position. On May 28, however, he reports that Dr. Elliott will have to close the school. In both letters he remarks on the difficulty of pursuing a career in education in the South at this time.

Margaret Stevens Poor, "A Biography of John Clopton of Virginia," Duke M. A. thesis, 1948.

24 items and 6 volumes, added 3-25-69, concern the Clopton and Wallace descendants of John Clopton: Charles Montriau Wallace, Sr. and Jr., Jefferson and William Manson Wallace, and Joyce and Charlotte Clopton.

The writings in the addition are miscellaneous in character, belonging chiefly to Charles Montriau Wallace, Jr.

Three of the six volumes added are commonplace books, or school exercise books of Charlotte and Joyce Clopton.

The one large volume in the addition contains:

1. A registry of shipping accounts,
1838-1839
2. Poetry and school exercises
3. A catalogue of the library of Charles Montriau Wallace, Sr., in 1864.
4. Descriptions of the battlefields of Cold Harbor and Seven Pines, possibly by one of the Clopton girls
5. A journal of family affairs that was kept from 1846 to 1869.

Clopton, John

1 vol. transferred from Edmund and William W. Williams MSS., 11-18-81. This volume is an undated list of voters in New Kent County, Virginia. It probably dates from the last quarter of the 19th century. The volume contains an alphabetical list of names with the post office and precinct noted beside each name. The list is not extensive and is not a complete list of voters.

For genealogy of the family see Lucy Lane Erwin, The Ancestry of William Clopton of York County, Virginia, (1939).

Cloud, Mary E. Papers. 1847-1884.
Front Royal, Va. Sketch. 203 pieces.

This collection consists entirely of personal correspondence among the brothers and sisters of the Cloud family, and with other relatives and friends. The subject matter of the letters is unusually trivial, and reveals very little as to the activities of the family or the identity of its various members.

The family was strongly religious and the father was probably a minister in the Methodist church. He died in 1859. The children were:

Cloud, Marh E. Sketch (2)

Mary E., R. Virginia, Daniel, Ann, Sarah, Kate, and Robbie. Mary and Virginia Cloud were apparently never married. During the Civil War they both carried on an extensive correspondence with soldiers. Sara Cloud was married in April, 1852, to A. S. Gibbons who was a minister and teacher. They sailed immediately for California where they lived for several years at Colonna and Santa Clara. Gibbons was engaged in teaching at both places. [Most of the California letters have been retained by the owner and are not in the collection.] About 1860 the Gibbons' returned east and were, during the Civil War, at Athens, Ohio, where A.S. Gibbons was on the faculty of the Ohio University. In 1878 they were again in California at the University of the Pacific.

Daniel Cloud lived in Baltimore where he was engaged in business. His wife was named Lou. Ann W. Cloud was married to M.C. Hopewell, and had a son named Mordecai Cloud Hopewell. Kate and Robbie Cloud appear too slightly in the correspondence to give any information of themselves.

During the Civil War the Cloud home was frequently in the path of invasion from both armies. There is no record in the correspondence however, of destruction or strong feelings on the part of the family, and it is difficult to determine to which side they gave allegiance. Sometime in 1864 Virginia Cloud went through the lines to Baltimore where she visited her brother Daniel. Later she went on to Ohio to visit her sister, Sara Cloud Gibbons. Early in 1865 she tried to return to Front Royal, Va., but was not allowed to do so, even though she had a pass signed by Abraham Lincoln.

The collection can scarcely be held as valuable for social history, life, and customs, for most of the correspondence is too trivial to Contain much comment of that nature. The letters are a very imperfect revelation of a middle class, well educated, border state family. The Civil War letters include letters from soldiers stationed at Manassas and Centreville, Va. The soldiers' letters comment on: conditions in Baltimore, Md. at the outbreak of war, 1861; comments throughout on camp life - especially at Camp Pickens and Centreville; Franklin Guards (N.C.), Aug. 11, 1861; William N. Pendleton and the sermon he preached at Centreville, Dec. 3, 1861; description of the Union Hotel hospital at Winchester, Va., Nov. 17, 1862; death of Stonewall Jackson, May 19, 1863; Maryland invasion, June 30, 1863; Price of meals in Culpepper, Aug. 24, 1863; Battle's Brigade and its movements and the burning of homes in Chambersburg, Pa. by troops under Gen. McCausland, Aug. 8, 1864; Johnson's Island prison, 1864-1865; letters to Gen. Sheridan and to Abraham Lincoln concerning a pass through the lines; and a letter of July 23, 1865 concerning the Yankee occupation force at Lexington and their behavior. There are comments throughout on skirmishes and the war.

Clyde, Paul Hibbert and Mary (Kestler). Papers.
Durham, Durham Co., N.C.

Paul Hibbert Clyde (1896-), historian, was born in Victoria, British Columbia, Canada. After receiving his Ph.D. from Stanford University in 1925, he taught history at Ohio State University (1925-1931), Stanford University (1928-1929), the University of Kentucky (1931-1937), and Duke University (1937-1961). A specialist in Far Eastern History, he wrote many articles and books on the subject, and served as a guest lecturer or consultant on numerous occasions. He also served with the Duke Endowment (1961-1970).

The collection consists of newspaper clippings, and a few drafts of memoranda and translations of foreign news reports, given to Professor Clyde by Hugh L. Keenleyside, who was first secretary of the Canadian Legation in Tokyo (1929-1936). The clippings come from about 30 English language newspapers and news services in Canada, China, Great Britain, Japan, and the United States. Centering on Sino-Japanese relations, they concern contemporary political, social, economic, military, and international affairs in China, Japan, and Manchuria (Manchukuo), primarily from the perspective of Japan's role in these events.

These clipping files have been entitled the East Asian Clipping Files, and they are arranged alphabetically according to subject headings (a list of the subject headings is kept in the Inventory File drawer.), and then chronologically within the files. The collection was originally arranged in 48 boxes, but three of the boxes have been lost.

Cobb (1815 - 1868) was born and educated in Georgia, practiced law, entered Congress in 1844 and was a member of Buchanan's cabinet. In 1850 Cobb was a Whig, but by 1860 he favored secession. He served in the Confederate army, resumed law practice after the war, and died suddenly in New York. [See D.A.B., IV p 241f.]

Mary Ann (Lamar) Cobb in Washington to her son Lamar dated Oct. 13, 1860 with a postscript written two days later. Mrs. Cobb describes a state dinner and a party given at the White House for the Prince of Wales which she attended. She notes very carefully the seating arrangement at the state dinner and at a dinner given by Lord Lyons that her husband attended. She gives her impression of the prince and says that Buchanan is the greatest president "since Washington and Jackson."

7-13-49 three letters were added. Alex. C. Morton writes to Howell Cobb opposing the nomination of A. H. Colquitt for Congress. He says that Robert Toombs has been there rallying the Whigs, who are enthusiastic for Jenkins, and that he is afraid the Democrats are doomed to defeat.

Cobb, Howell (1795-1864). Papers. Houston
County, Georgia

Howell Cobb (1795-1864), lawyer, author, planter, and politician, was born in Savannah. By 1821 he had moved to Houston County where he was a lawyer. He was one of the county's first justices of the peace and was thrice elected to the state senate between 1829 and 1832. Cobb attended the anti-Van Buren convention in 1836 and served as a presidential elector for Hugh L. White, one of Van Buren's opponents. In 1857 Cobb was a delegate to the Democratic Party's state gubernatorial convention, and he was active that summer in behalf of Joseph E. Brown's campaign for governor. Cobb was an active Methodist and involved with railroad promotion, planters' conventions, and education for women. When he died in 1864, he owned some 30 slaves and a 700-acre plantation near Perry.

Cobb has often been confused with his namesake, the eminent George politician Howell

Cobb, Howell (1795-1864)

Cobb (1815-1868), and libraries have often attributed the writings of Howell Cobb (1795-1864) of Houston to Howell Cobb (1815-1868) of Athens. This problem is discussed in "The Two Howell Cobbs: A Case of Mistaken Identity," The Journal of Southern History, Vol. XXVIII, No. 3 (Aug., 1962).

Cobb's letter of Oct. 23, 1860, to Col. H. H. Waters has been transferred from the papers of Howell Cobb of Athens with whom it was formerly confused. This letter concerns the

Thomas Reade Rootes Cobb, brother of Howell Cobb, was born at Cherry Hill, Jefferson county, Georgia, April 10, 1823 and was killed at the battle of Fredericksburg, Va., Dec. 13, 1862. He was graduated at the University of Georgia in 1841, standing at the head of his class; was admitted to the bar; and was reporter of the Supreme Court of Georgia from 1849-1857. He was an active and able member of the Confederate Congress, in which he served as chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs. Cobb was a Presbyterian, was a trustee of the University of Georgia, and was active in religious and educational work in his state. He gave large sums of money to Lucy Cobb Institute, which was named for his daughter, who died at the age of fourteen. He published Digest of the Laws of Georgia (1851); Inquiry into the Law of Negro Slavery in the U.S. (1858); Historical Sketch of Slavery from the Earliest Periods, (1859). In August 1861, Cobb was commissioned Colonel of Cobb's Legion and in November, 1862, he was promoted to the rank of brigadier-general. A brilliant military career was cut short of Fredericksburg in December, 1862.

The collection contains some routine political correspondence. There are two letters regarding the death of Edward F. Bagley in Nov., 1861. There is a very interesting letter to his wife from Fredericksburg dated Nov. 29, 1862 in which he wrote hopefully of the war and cheerfully of little details of camp life.

Cobden, Richard. Papers, 1840-1864. Manchester, Lancaster, Co., Eng.

Richard Cobden (1804-1865), Manchester industrialist, member of Parliament and one of the founders of the National Anti-Corn Law League, was most instrumental in focusing public opinion against the Corn Laws and finally gaining their repeal by Parliament in 1846. Many of Cobden's letters in this collection mention his opposition to these laws.

Two letters, addressed to Murdo Young of The Sun in 1840 and 1845, exhort him to concentrate newspaper attacks on the Corn Laws.

Cobden, Richard

The first advises Young to stay away from controversial theology, and the second mentions a meeting at Southwash where George Wilson and Blackburn of the Globe advocated repeal of a fixed duty on corn.

A plea for financial aid to keep his lecturers and press working in order to force Robert Peel to yield is the subject of an 1841 letter to William Rathbone Greg. In 1842 he sends his regrets to Peter Rylands as unable to attend an anti-corn law tea party at Warrington, and in 1843 he tells Samuel Towns he will be happy to meet working men at a free trade banquet. Also in 1843 he appeals to John Saltzer for local facts bearing on corn supply, especially confirmation that during the agricultural depression of 1821-22 Norfolk suffered severely. Furthermore, Cobden asks for recorded opinions of Lord Leicester in favor of free trade. An unnamed bill in the Lords is the subject of his 1846 letter to Edward Watkins.

His letter to Edward Ashworth of 1848 refers to the National Budget he just sent to Robertson Gladstone. In mentioning Essex farmers, whose crops have been short and badly housed, he says "we" will prevent them from re-enacting corn laws. He then recommends Sir Joshua Walmsley as a great favorite in the House among independents, and expresses pleasure that Ashworth is interested in the peace movement which Cobden considers an auxiliary to financial reform.

In 1850 he tells Charles May that once again he must go to battle against the protectionists, and sends a request to Wm. Langton for a copy of the Manchester Statistical Society's report of the religious affiliations of those in the region.

5

A clipping about his early business venture and a loan from John Lewis is attached to an 1857 letter to Alexander Ireland.

Cobden's letter to Thomas Fairbairn in 1863 quotes a friend, who says that though the newspapers indicate William Gladstone will have a surplus, the nine months' figures show a large deficit. Gen. Jonathan Peel, formerly head of the War Department, also mentioned the general facility for mystifying the accounts.

Later the same year Cobden writes to Edward Ashworth, apparently regarding the forthcoming visit of Ashworth's son to the United States. He has no great affection for William Henry Seward, but he says Charles Sumner will give young Ashworth all the necessary introductions to politicians. His advice is to go at least as far west as Chicago to understand the United States.

One undated letter to John Cassell sends an article for the Freeholder, suggests an article about savings in the cost of living, and asks if they will print his letter against the stamp duty.

Cobden, Richard

1 item added; 10-27-60, transferred from Miscellaneous File. In a letter of Dec. 13, 1849, Richard Cobden discusses constitutional government and the revolutions of 1848 with Conte Agostine Petitti Bagliani di Roreto.

4 items added 12-12-60: This addition consists of four letters which were written by Richard Cobden between 1841 and 1864. A letter of 1841 refers to the distribution of pamphlets for the Anti-Corn Law League. In a letter written between 1848 and 1852 to William Edward Forster, Cobden gave his opinion of recent events in France and recalled his impression of a meeting with Louis Napoleon in 1846. On March 4, 1861, Cobden wrote a long letter to Sir Samuel Morton Peto, First Baronet, in which he discussed British-French relations and the status of naval armaments. Cobden argued that the agitation against France and the demand for more ships and fortifications were unnecessary and exaggerated. On April 11, 1864, Cobden wrote to Thomas Bayley Potter [?] that a dissolution of Parliament was unlikely. He argued that the best cure for the demoralization of the Whigs would be a few years spent in opposition. He also noted the visit of Garibaldi in London on April 11.

Cobden, Richard

8

1 item added, 3-23-61: This letter (July 16 1848) from Cobden contains his opinion about the issue of armaments which was being considered by Parliament. Cobden opposes the military and naval viewpoint and attacks the support given to it by the "old Duke," who is probably the Duke of Wellington.

4 items added, 9-17-64. A broadside dated Jan. 30, 1846, is entitled "Letter from Mr. Cobden to the Tenant Farmers." Cobden discussed the issue of whether to repeal the corn laws gradually or immediately and recommended the latter method.

On Feb. 28, 1846, Cobden requested Robert Hyde Greg, the economist, to sound out Sir James Graham, the Home Secretary, and the Peel cabinet about an immediate repeal of the corn laws, and he explained the arguments that should appeal to them. In exchange for the government's remaining passive and allowing repeal, Cobden was willing to dissolve the Anti-Corn Law League. The letter is dated only "Saturday Evening," but Cobden mentioned that Russell would make a speech on Monday in behalf of immediate repeal. Russell made such a speech on Monday, March 2, 1846, and the letter apparently dates from Feb. 28.

On Oct. 24, 1851, Cobden asked Thomas Beggs to revise his article for the Freeholder and to assist with the preparation of the coming issue. He also reported his advice to Sadleir and his associates about getting a secretary familiar with English society.

On March 28, 1863, he explained to Edward Taylor that he had not actually stated his position on the government's plan of emigration. He expected to discuss the matter when Parliament met and took up the question of the economic distress in Lancashire.

1 item added, 11-1-67. On June 6, 1850, Cobden commented on the political economy of Jules Lechevalier.

3 items added, 11-7-67. A draft letter is Cobden's description of a mass meeting on the preceding day at Manchester in which the Tories deserted their leaders by joining the opposition to the corn laws. Someone other than Cobden has dated the letters as Sept. 17, 1841. It may be correct, for The Times of Sept. 14 (p. 6) reported that a meeting was scheduled for the 16th. Cobden also noted the late election in which Sir George Murray was a candidate; he contested a seat at Manchester in 1841.

On Dec. 1, 1845, Cobden advised John Dillon

about the role of the business leaders of London in the campaign to repeal the corn laws.

On Jan. 2, 1853, he wrote to Thomas Beggs about the possibility of a reform bill, and he criticized the public support in England for war with Russia over the Eastern Question.

1 item added, 11-10-67. On March 22, 1855, Cobden asked for the aid of Dr. Hudson in behalf of the Newspaper Stamp Duties Bill that he regarded as a measure for free trade in news.

5 items added, 3-5-70: The protectionists

Cobden, Richard

raised such a clamor at a public meeting that James Montgomery was prevented from speaking on free trade. Cobden's letter to him on April 17, 1843, gave his reaction to the episode with a suggestion that free traders might have to organize again. Montgomery may have been the superintendent of the York Factories, Saco, who wrote several works on cotton manufacture.

On Jan. 16, 1849, Cobden objected to Edward Foster's reading of his letter at a meeting of farmers in Cambridge. An envelope of Apr. 25,

1843, is evidence of another letter to Foster.

On June 6, 1861, Levi Leone announced a meeting with Cobden by the council of the International Decimal Association. They were to consider action in the House of Commons.

An undated letter has a watermark of 1858. It concerned the printing of one of Cobden's publications.

3 items added, 4-8-70: In an undated letter with a watermark of 1846, Cobden assured Mr. Anstie that a reduction of duties on tobacco could be achieved. The last letter (1) of the first name remains, the rest having been torn away. The addressee may have been Paul Anstie, a manufacturer of liberal reputation.

On March 7, 1853, Cobden wrote to Miss S. Hilditch about her problems and her support of free trade when it was not fashionable.

Catherine Cobden's letter to Mrs. Smith about social matters was dated only June 7; the paper has a watermark of 1862.

1 item added, 6-12-70: A letter of Feb. 3, 1857, to Robert Wilson Smiles, secretary of the Manchester Public Day School Association. Cobden commented upon popular education, crime, juvenile delinquency, and the education movement at Manchester.

2 items added, 2-22-71. On Sept. 21, 1848, Cobden wrote to William Scholefield, M.P., about the relationship of the free trade movement, extension of the franchise through the freehold qualification, and the avoidance of revolution in Britain.

On March 26, 1864, he suggested that John Richardson's lecture concern the economic situation before and after the repeal of the Corn Laws rather than a personal biography.

1 item added, 4-27-84. Cobden's letter of April 10, 1863, to William Tallack concerned capital punishment. Tallack was an author of many books on reform of the penal system.

This collection consists largely of the legal papers, letters, and documents of Judge Albert L. Coble between 1895 and 1900. There are also a number of family letters in the collection and some business letters of his wife, especially after his death.

To sketch the life of Judge Coble briefly, he was born in Alamance County on

August 26, 1855 and died on January 1, 1918. He attended the University of North Carolina and graduated with the A.B. degree in 1880. During his last year he was an instructor in Latin. He returned to the University from 1883-86 as a law student, and at the same time was an asst. prof. of mathematics. From 1895 to 1903 he was a judge in the Superior Court of North Carolina, and from 1909 to 1913 he was an asst. U. S. district attorney.

There are a few items which should be noted here. An undated letter in the first folder lists the 1880 graduates of UNC and their present addresses. One of the numerous letters from his wife comments on the Spanish-American War news. There are a number of tax receipts and occupational licenses from 1900-1916. There are several letters in 1913 concerning some troubles in the Episcopal parish at Statesville, of which Coble was Senior Warden. There are a number of letters to Mrs. Coble in 1918 extending sympathy on the death of her husband; some of these comment on various attitudes and conditions concerning the World War. In the 1920's there are a number of letters to Mrs. Coble regarding her work in the N. C. Federation of Women's Clubs; she was apparently a district president for awhile. The Cobles were probably Republicans, for there are several items concerning the Republican party in N. C. in the 1920's, including a "Plan of Organization" in N. C. in 1922.

The primary value of the collection is in the large number of papers which are preserved from his service as a Superior Court Judge. The few supplementary items listed above add considerable interest, however, for the historian.

The vol. contains minutes of the Alpha Book Club, of which Mrs. Coble was a member.

2-3-55 40 items added. These consist of letters to Dr. S. W. Little of Cana, North Carolina, from Albert L. Coble, Assistant United States District Attorney, of Statesville, N.C., concerning land sales and transfers, loans, mortgages, wills and deeds, and the payment of promissory notes.

Coble, Albert L.

A memorandum book and a few bills and receipts are included in the collection.

John Cochran (1730-1807), inspector general of the Continental Army hospitals during the Revolutionary War, writes from Newburgh, N. Y., in 1783 in regard to Dr. John Warren. Evidently he was interested in Dr. Warren (1753-1815), over whom a conflict in orders had arisen. Cochran wished to withdraw John Warren from Boston, where the military hospital had been broken up. At this time Dr. Warren was a prime mover in the formation of Harvard Medical School, which opened in the fall of 1783. War-

Cockburn, George (1856-1925). Papers, 1899-1900
London, England.

Colonel George Cockburn (1856-1925), C.B.E., was the son of Admiral James Horsford Cockburn. The colonel attended Eton and joined a rifle brigade in 1876. His military service included India (1889-1894), the staff of the Eastern Command (1896-1897), the Sudan (1898), Crete (1898-1899), the Boer War (1899-1901), and the First World War. He retired in 1916.

Cockburn was a major when he served in the Boer War. He was inside the defences of Ladysmith, Natal, while it was besieged by the Boers throughout Nov., 1899-Feb., 1900. His two long letters to his mother were written on various dates during these four months, and they are a chronicle of the seige.

The notice of James H. Cockburn's marriage, May 19, 1852, to Harriot Emily, only daughter of the Rev. Joseph Gedge, Rector of Bildeston, appears in The Gentleman's Magazine, XXXVIII (1852), 89.

COCKE, John Hartwell

Letters 1780-1800, Surry county, Va.

Sketch

John Hartwell Cocke (Sept. 19, 1780-July 1, 1866), son of John Hartwell and Elizabeth (Kennon) Cocke, was born in Surry county, Va. After attending William and Mary College (1794-99), he chose the life of country gentleman at "Bremo" in Fluvanna county. He married on Dec. 25, 1802, Ann Blous Barraud of Norfolk, by whom he had several children.

among them was Philip St. George Cocke. He promoted new agricultural methods, the founding of agricultural societies, the developing of waterways, and various public improvements. He attacked the practice of making tobacco, and published a monograph, Tobacco (1860) to prove it economically and ethically "the bane of Virginia husbandry." During the War of 1812 he rose in eighteen months from captain to brigadier general, commanding the Virginia troops guarding Richmond. His name was canvassed for governor in 1814, but Cocke declined. In religious and social movements his activities were unceasing and influential. Slavery he denounced as a curse and from 1819 until his death he was senior vice-president of the American Colonization Society. He was insistent in demanding nation wide prohibition and was first president of the American Temperance Union. Without playing so conspicuous a part in the founding of the University of Virginia as did Jefferson and Joseph C. Cobell, Cocke's contribution was subordinate only to theirs. His share in its physical development and his thirty-three years(1819-52) on its Board of Visitors were indeed notable.

This collection contains the business letters of Gen. J. H. Cocke. One letter deals with the purchase of land in Perry county, Ala. and gives some idea as to what features were desirable and sought by the purchaser. The other letters are from overseers, who Cocke, William Johnston (1904-). Papers.

Ashville, Buncombe County, North Carolina

Cocke (1904-), a lawyer, was born in Asheville. He received legal training at the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill and at Oxford University, 1926-1929, England, where he was a Rhodes scholar. He received a B.A. in jurisprudence (1928) and a Bachelor of Civil Law from Oxford (1929). In addition he studied international relations in Geneva, Switzerland, in 1928. He was admitted to the English Bar,

Cocke, William Johnston (1904-)

1929, and passed the New York Bar Exam in 1930. He was licensed for the North Carolina Bar in 1931 when he began to practice law in Asheville. He was been active in a number of organizations and committees, including the Young Democratic Club, Buncombe County and North Carolina State Bar Associations, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill Alumni Association, Buncombe County Wildlife Club, Board of Trustees at Asheville College and a Democratic Party Precinct Chair. His various interests are reflected in the collection.

The collection is divided into nine categories: correspondence, 1815-1969; writings, 1682-1965; speeches, 1896-1965; miscellany, ca. 1908; clippings, 1792-1975; printed material, 1865-1977; volumes, 1886-1954; pictures, late 19th and early 20th century; and an alphabetical file, 1787-1977, arranged by topic. The collection covers a wide variety of topics and time periods, but most of the material dates during 1900-1960 and includes Cocke's personal correspondence and materials relating to his political and civic interests. His personal correspondence and clippings indicate his staunch support and interest in the Democratic Party on both the state and national levels. Correspondents include: Joseph Broughton, James Braxton Craven (1918-1977), Sam Ervin (1896-1985, Thad Eure, Luther Hodges (1898-1974), Clyde R. Hoey, B. Everett Jordan, Robert R. Reynolds and Terry Sanford.

Correspondence (1815-1969). Early correspondence, 1815-1832, and a typewritten transcript of it includes that of William Michael Cocke (1815-1896). Letters from Cocke to his parents and brother from Merton College, Oxford University, date from May 2, 1926 to July 21, 1929. They provide an insight into the life of an American law student in England and his perspective of English versus American law and customs. His travels to other areas of England and to Italy, Spain, Germany, Scotland, and Switzerland while on breaks in the school year are described in some detail. Included is a visit to Lady Astor's home, where he met the future King Edward VIII, and a description of Thomas Wolfe whom he knew and visited with while in England. There is a typed transcript of these letters dating from September 20, 1926, to July 21, 1929, but some sensitive areas in the letters have been excluded from the typescript.

Later correspondence, 1932-1967, includes Cocke's interest and support for the Rhodes Scholarship and his efforts to get a manuscript published, Jury Trial in North Carolina (based on Giles Duncombe's work Tryals Per Pais

Cocke, William Johnston (1904-) 7
published in 1682). A search of the Library of Congress National Union Catalog indicates Cocke's work was never published. The manuscript of this work and a typewritten transcript of Duncombe's work are included in the writings category of the collection.

Writings. This category includes short story and novel length manuscripts by Nola (Dilworth) Cocke, who is Cocke's mother. One of the short stories, "Outpointing the Octopus" was published in Psychology magazine June, 1930. That issue

Cocke, William Johnston (1904-)

8

is included in the collection.

"My Reminiscences of the Sixties (1861-1865)" and a speech before the Asheville Women's Club in May, 1924, are based on Sarah "Sallie" E. J. (Broyles) Dilworth's impressions of life during the Civil War and Reconstruction in Broylesville, Tennessee. Mrs. Dilworth is Cocke's grandmother.

Speeches. Speeches are arranged in chronological order. Names are not on all of them, but some are arranged with the corresponding news article which includes the speaker's name. Most speeches were made by William Cocke, Sr. or his son. Some were made while Cocke, Sr. was mayor of Asheville. Most of them are political in nature, relating to specific political candidates or political issues of the period.

Volumes. One of the volumes belonged to Cocke, Sr. and was first used as a guardian account book for some person, probably while a minor, in 1894-1895. Later the volume was used as a scrapbook with political clippings (1898-1910). Most of the accounts were covered over when the volume was used as a scrapbook.

Clippings include a discussion of the proposed

N.C. amendment to the state constitution which required a literacy test for voter registrants who were not entitled to vote on or before January 1, 1867. A separate scrapbook of the United States Senate re-election campaign (1954) of Alton Asa Lennon is in the collection. Cocke was Lennon's Buncombe County campaign manager.

Pictures. The category includes Cocke-Dilworth family pictures. However, most of the photographs are late 19th century albumen prints of scenery and buildings in England, Ireland, France, Germany, Italy, Scotland and Switzerland.

Alphabetical File. The file contains information about several organizations Cocke was involved with including the United World Federalists, Inc., Young Democratic Club of North Carolina and Buncombe County and the Zeb Vance Debating Society. It also contains information about the attempt to establish the state of Franklin in what is now western North Carolina (1784-1788) and legal documents pertaining to Tennessee (1787-1793).

Currently, the territory noted in the Tennessee legal papers is in East Tennessee. However, at the time the documents were written the territory was either in what was then Western North Carolina and referred to as Washington District or County or in that area of North Carolina transferred back to the national government in 1789. The ceded area became known officially on May 26, 1790, as the Territory of the United States South of the River Ohio. Various jurisdictional names were used in the documents. They and the dates the terms used include: North Carolina, Washington County, 1787-1789; North Carolina, Washington District, and North Carolina, Washington County, 1790. Several names were used for the area that was ceded back to the national government. They include: United States of America South of the River Ohio, 1791, 1792; Washington County, Territory South of the Ohio, 1792; Territory of the U. S. of America, Washington County, 1791, 1792; Territory of the U. S. South of the River of America, South of the River Ohio, 1791 and tory of U. S. South of Ohio, United States of Different types of legal documents are represented including those relating to horse stealing, breaking and entering, forgery, trespasses, larceny, assaults, summonses, an affidavit for a new trial and one involving a dispute about the sale of a slave. The documents include autographs of: John Tipton, member of the 1st

Tennessee Assembly, 1793, and 1794-1795; John Sevier, governor of the state of Franklin, 1785-1788, and first governor of Tennessee, 1796-1801, 1803-1809; and William Cocke (1748-1828).

There is extensive information about the study of court reform in North Carolina (1954-1961). This study was done under the auspices of the Committee on Improving and Expediting the Administration of Justice of the N. C. Bar Association. It became known as the Bell Committee after the chair of the Committee, J. Spencer Bell, of Charlotte.

Other information, 1949-1972, illustrates Cocke's interest in educating the people of North Carolina about the role of the state in international relations. Correspondence between Cocke, state legislators and others show how he lobbied for the passage of the bill which would set up the Commission on International Cooperation under the N. C. Dept. of Conservation and Development. According to information in the collection, bills to set up the Commission and to appropriate funds for it were ratified by the

Cocke, William Johnston (1904-) 17

N. C. General Assembly in June and July of 1971.

Additional material in the Alphabetical File includes: transcripts of court cases with which Cocke was involved; brochures about Democratic candidates and other local and national campaign miscellany (1904-1970); and clippings during Terry Sanford's tenure as governor of North Carolina (1961-1963).

William A. Cockefair was sworn into service in the Fifteenth Regiment of Indiana Volunteers, Co. I, in Lafayette, Indiana, on June 14, 1861. His diary begins on that day and ends abruptly on September 13, 1862. Cockefair faithfully recorded the movements of his regiment from Indiana to Rich Mountain, Va., and into Tennessee where they remained for most of the period covered by the diary. The regiment was at Cheat Mountain for several months, moved down the Tennessee River and into Arkansas where they fought in the Battle of Pea Ridge (April, 1862). Cockefair reports hearing of Grant's attack on Pittsburghs Landing and the capture of Island No. 10. In May the regiment moved toward Corinth, Mississippi, occupied that city and moved into Alabama, reaching Huntsville. They were ordered on a forced march back into Tennessee, then moved into Kentucky where they were camped when the diary ends.

Cockrell, Monroe Fulkerson. Papers, 1859-1965.
Evanston, Cook Co., Illinois

This collection consists of the papers of Monroe Fulkerson Cockrell, a Chicago banking executive, whose avocation has been the study of history. His papers include his notes and correspondence concerning his research, copies of his essays, and some material that he had privately printed. Other printed material is catalogued in the card catalogue of the General Library.

Mr. Cockrell arranged his papers topically.

Cockrell, Monroe Fulkerson

This system has been maintained in arranging and cataloging them.

The bulk of the material concerns Cockrell's research on various issues of Civil War history. Among the individual items is a photostatic copy of a letter (Jan. 6, 1862) from Gen. Ambrose P. Hill to an unidentified doctor. Hill discussed the building of the Manassas Junction-Centerville Confederate Military Railroad; the plans of the C.S.A. Army and of the Union troops of Gen. Ambrose E. Burnside; and the activities of Gen. Edmund Kirby-Smith.

In a letter dated Feb. 26, 1865, Capt. Louis M. Hosea, U.S.A., wrote his sister concerning a mission authorized by Gen. Eli Long to negotiate a truce with Gen. Nathan B. Forrest. Hosea's descriptions of Forrest are vivid and penetrating, but he gives no details of the truce negotiations. A study by Cockrell undertakes to locate the place at which Gen. Forrest crossed the Sipsey River in Alabama. Cockrell also prepared notes on Forrest's statement

"git thar fustest with the mostest." See Cockrell's "Confederate General Nathan Bedford Forrest, 1861-1865" (Vol. III).

Other miscellaneous material collected by Cockrell include reprints of Seymour J. Frank's article, "The Conspiracy to Implicate the Confederate Leaders in Lincoln's Assassination"; a typed copy of a book review by Robert S. Henry of Lincoln and His Generals by T. Harry Williams; excerpts and reprints from studies of Stonewall Jackson; and correspondence and notes concerning the furniture in the Wilmer McLean house at Appomattox, Va.

Cockrell's study, "where Was Pickett at Gettysburg?", contains notes on the activities of Gen. George E. Pickett at the Battle of Gettysburg. His manuscript, "General P.G.T. Beauregard at First Manassas and Wilmer McLean at Manassas and Appomattox," contains excerpts from books and letters concerning the first Battle of Manassas (or Bull Run). Cockrell also gathered information on the location of the graves of several Civil War military leaders.

Also collected by Cockrell were notes and correspondence to refute the rumor that Gen. Erwin J.E. Rommel was sent to the U.S. by Hitler to study the strategy of various Civil War battles. Included is a copy of a letter from Gen. Frederick von Boetticher denying that he could have been mistaken for Rommel by American observers.

Among the larger collections of material are maps, data, and correspondence concerning the route taken by the members of the Confederate Cabinet as they fled from Richmond in 1865 and information on the Battle of Corinth, Miss. A folder entitled "Miscellaneous Civil War Notes" contains correspondence and printed material on various factors of Civil War history that interested Cockrell. Folders of book reviews contain numerous clippings and letters concerning books written on Civil War history.

There are three folders on the Siege of Vicksburg. Cockrell was engaged in research for a map on the siege and collected information on the Red River in La. and on the general terrain of the Vicksburg area. A photostatic copy of an excellent letter, dated Mar. 7, 1864, describes Sherman's expedition in Feb., 1864. The letter discusses Canton, Miss., and the destruction of railroads and property in Miss. Pictures of the Battle of Vicksburg and of the Confederate States Ram Arkansas were transferred to the Picture File.

Cockrell's collection, "Destiny in Dallas," contains letters from Shirley Seifert relating to her book Destiny in Dallas. The letters contain information on Alexander and Sarah Cockrell. See the Sarah (Horton) Cockrell MSS. for further information on Cockrell's ancestors.

The typed manuscript, The Flavor of Life in Small Towns, contains jokes and anecdotes exchanged between Cockrell and John R. Smith of Martinsville, Va.

A bound volume, Gathered Flowers, consists of correspondence between Cockrell and his friends in Georgia.

Cockrell printed issues of his magazine After Sundown. Sixteen volumes are bound and placed in the general stacks. Duplicate copies of Vols. IX-XVI have been placed with the Cockrell papers. Vol. IX contains Cockrell's journal written during a trip in 1955 from Evanston to the southeastern U.S. A copy of a letter from Sarah Hillhouse to her father, Col. Elisha Porter, describes early life in Washington, Ga. (Jan. 26, 1787). Vol. XIV includes letters from William Allen White, John W. Davis, and several good letters from Katherine Anne Porter in which she discussed her writing style and her personal life.

On Oct. 1, 1965, Cockrell held an exhibit of various items collected by him. An invitation to the exhibit contains a list of these items and indicated the areas of Cockrell's activities and interests.

3 items added, 4-23-69: A letter from Cockrell to Ernest Samuels (August 19, 1951), Samuels's response (October 7, 1951), and a copy of an address given by Samuels to the Caxton Club of Chicago (May 12, 1951). The address, entitled "Henry Adams and the Permanent Emergency," and the two letters refer to Adams's perspective on history and the future of mankind. Samuels's interpretation is expanded in his biography of Adams.

2 items added, 7-7-72: Memorandum dated Nov. 17, 1959, that was written by Mr. Cockrell about the naming of Dallas, Texas; and a letter written by his daughter on June 14, 1972, that announces his death on the previous May 29 and that of his sister Sarah eight days later.

Cockrell, Sarah (Horton). Papers, 1861-1871.
Dallas, Texas. 63 items.

Most of this collection came originally in the form of photostats bound in a volume entitled "Civil War Letters of George W. Guess to Sarah Horton Cockrell." This vol. (No. 1440) was cataloged, but the sketch for it has been transferred under the title given above and a cross reference made from this collection to the Guess vol. and vice versa. Mrs. Cockrell's name has been given to the collection of originals since some of the items addressed to her are not from Guess.

Several items have been added to this collect ion since the photostats were bound in 1946. A description of these will appear at the end of the original sketch.

The original sketch reads as follows:

Principally Civil War letters of George W. Guess (1829-1868), of Col. J. W. Spright of ^[Spright's Brigade] Waco, Texas, 31st Regt., Texas Vol. Cavalry and attorney of Dallas, to Sarah(Horton) Cockrell (1819-1892), widow of Alexander Cockrell I (d.1858), also of Dallas, from Camp Scott, McDonald Co., Mo.; from Camp Giney; from Camp Holcomb, on Red River near Clarksville, Texas; from Camp Duncan, Saline Co., Ark.; from Camp

Thompson, Scott Co., Ark.; from Camp Roane, Sebastian Co., Ark.; from Camp on Vache-Grass, Ark.; from a camp near Paris, Texas; from Camp Kiamishi, Choctaw Nation; from a field camp near Clarksville, Tex. [?]; from a camp near Thibodaux, La.; from Camp Vermillion, La.; from a camp at Morgan's Ferry on Bayou Atchafalaya, La.; from a prison near New Orleans; from Alexandria, La.; and from Shreveport. Included also are a few Civil War letters of Wm. D. Flynn, James W. Gray, Mitchell Gray, Andrew W. Gray, and a few Civil War receipts.

The letters of Guess contain a description of the Battle of Oak Hill fought on Wilson's Creek, evidently in Mo., on Aug. 10, 1861, and comments on the desire of many of the Texas soldiers to obtain discharges after the Battle of Oak Hill, personal matters, food, his duties, a good description of Franklin, Yell, and Scott counties, Ark., comments on the lame excuses of Texas soldiers who get medical discharges, descriptions of skirmishes in Ark. in 1862, accounts of the esprit de corps in Guess' regt., deaths and general health of the soldiers, dislike of General Hindman, complaints of the inefficiency of the Dallas post office, reference to a Federal captain of Hunt Co. (Martin D. Hart, once a member of the Texas legislature) who had preached against conscription in Greenville, Texas, of Texas leaders who shunned going to war, his capture on Sept. 29, 1863, and his imprisonment, comments on the progress of the war in other sectors of the South, friction between officers, impressment and loss to the Yankees of his (Guess') cotton until only 4,400 bales were left out of more than 15,000, which he had obtained by selling land and Negroes (see letter of June 18, 1864), reference to "the Jayhawkes of whom I have heard so much lately" (letter of June 18, 1864), numerous references to such outstanding Confederate leaders as Buckner and Beauregard, an excellent description of the hardships of war on civilians (letter of June 30, 1864) in the vicinity of Alexandria, La., rumors of Grant's activities in Va., an account of one Major Campbells of Dallas who had circulated a rumor that Guess was trading with the Federals, a statement that Gen. Kirby Smith had ordered his exchange (letter of Jan. 5, 1865), and the removal of slaves from La. to Texas by planters.

Cockrell, Sarah (Horton)

Included also at the end of the volume are a few letters of James and Mitchel Gray, Confed soldiers. Mitchel Gray later (May 11, 1871) married Aurelia Effie Cockrell (d. Feb. 28, 1872), the daughter of Sarah (Horton) Cockrell.

The letters of Guess are very sprightly and well written with generous anathema for numerous Dallas individuals who accused him of trading with the enemy.

The 12 items added to the collection after the Guess volume was bound include: Letter of Aug. 21, 1861 from Guess near Springfield, Mo., which speaks of the war in that state and the divided sympathies of the people; letter of Coffin, Robert Barry. Papers. New York, N. Y.

Robert Barry Coffin (1826-1886) was a member of one of New York's most prominent families. He was plagued with ill health and found it difficult to settle in a career suited to his interests and ability. In 1863, he finally located in the auditor's department of the New York customhouse and remained there until just before his death, with the exception of the years 1869 to 1875. He was interested in literary matters and wrote numerous articles. For short periods he was also editor of the Home Journal and of The Table. He frequently used the pseudonym Barry Gray.

On September 20, 1855, Frederick Swartwout Cozzens, the author, wrote to Coffin to acknowledge the receipt of a check and to decline an invitation.

Coghill, James O. Papers, 1843 (1861-1864)
1894. Henderson, Granville Co., N. C. Sketch.

Capt. James O. Coghill of Henderson, N. C., was a Granville County farmer who sent four sons into the Confederate Army. He himself was in the ~~43rd~~ 42nd N. C. Militia. The letters from his four sons compose the bulk of the papers. On May, 1861, Joseph W., J. Norfleet, and K. Wesley Coghill enlisted in Co. G, (Granville Rifles), 13th N. C. Volunteers (after May, 1862, the 23rd N. C. Troops). They began the war at Weldon, N. C., moving to Richmond and Manassas just too late to fight at First Bull Run. Typhoid and measles struck the Confederate Army, Joseph and Norfleet died in Sept. at Culpeper Court House, where there were so many sick that James O. Coghill came from N. C. to nurse his remaining son, Wesley. These letters will refer to many names in the 23rd, particularly in Co. G. James Breedlove and Charles C. Blacknall are among the officers mentioned. Moore's Roster of N. C. Troops erroneously lists the two Coghill boys' deaths as Sept., 1862.

Wesley, who was so ill, was listed as a deserter. The letters indicate Wesley was later wounded in the hand and again became too ill to serve. He returned home late in 1863--not as a deserter--and hoped to find an easy job to help the war.

The invasion of the N. C. coast is echoed in the spring of 1862. Troops at Raleigh receive a shipment of arms from England, as the State braces to repel an invasion by Burnside's Union Army.

Jonathan Fuller Coghill joined Wesley in the 13 th N. C. in March of 1862. From this time the letters are chiefly his. On Sept. 2, 1862, he enters Maryland after a march from Leesburg. Here he states General A. P. Hill was the first man to land in Maryland. He fights at Fredericksburg on December 13, 1862, and it is just before this battle that Wesley Coghill's hand is injured, and he goes home to N. C.

K. Wesley returned to the Army in May of 1863, in time to march from Culpeper Court House to Gettysburg. J. Fuller describes his own part in that battle in a note, ca. July, 1863. The 23rd Regiment is along the Rapidan River at Orange Court House in the fall of 1863, during which it is infrequent skirmishes. K. Wesley Coghill becomes ill in November and returns home. Fuller writes in December to him to round up deserters in Granville Co. He fights at Kelly's Ford on Nov. 7, 1863, spends the winter at Orange Court House, and comments on Kirkpatrick's raid on Richmond on Mar. 4, 1864,

5

from Taylorsville, twenty-two miles northeast of Richmond. By May 23, 1864, he has been through five battles near Richmond, and lists the wounded of the 23rd. In Oct., he is in the Shenandoah Valley with General Early, commenting on the fourth Battle of Winchester, the fight at Fisher's Hill, a "stampede of stampedes" at Strasburg, the devastation of the Shenandoah by Union raiders, and the Battle of Cedar Creek, Va. with its "disgraceful" retreat. The war letters end at Harrisonburg, Va., in Nov., 1864.

Of interest is the concern of the families in North Carolina for their soldiers and the aid they sent to their relatives (food and clothing). Neighbor helped neighbor in the 23rd Regiment.

Colborne, John, First Baron Seaton. Papers,
1819-1854. Lyneham Park, Devonshire, England

John Colborne, First Baron Seaton (1778-1863), was a British general and colonial official. He fought in Egypt (1801) and Sicily (1806), and commanded the 52nd Regiment of Foot during the Peninsular Campaign and at Waterloo. He was Lieutenant Governor of Guernsey (1821-1828) and of Upper Canada (1828-1838), Lord High Commissioner of the Ionian Islands (1843-1849), and Commander of the Forces in Ireland (1855-1860). His action in quelling the rebellion of 1837-1838 in Canada was followed by elevation to the peerage in 1834 as Baron Seaton.

Colborne, John, First Baron Seaton

The collection consists primarily of forty-one letters written to Colborne by Generals Sir George Thomas Napier and Sir William Francis Patrick Napier between 1819 and 1854, mostly 1819-1842. Sir William Napier was historian of the Peninsular War, and this war is a major topic of correspondence, especially in the 1820's. The careers of the Napiers, including their brother Sir Charles James Napier, were prominently noted, along with references to the education and early careers of the sons of Sir George, two of whom also became generals. Scattered manuscripts concern Canada, Guernsey Island, the Ionian Islands, South Africa, South Australia, and British and French politics. Specific citations for these topics and for numerous civil and military officials are listed in the Subject File, and some are noted below. For additional material on many of these subjects see H. A. Bruce, ed., Life of General Sir William Napier (London, 1864).

In 1823 William Napier decided to write his History of the Peninsular War that was published in six volumes between 1828 and 1840. Both he and Colborne served in that conflict, and his letters of the 1820's include detailed discussions of sources and plans for the book and of particular battles and campaigns. Numerous British and French generals are noted as well as authors of works about the war. There are also references to several articles that Napier wrote for the Edinburgh Review.

George Napier was an officer of the 3rd Foot

Colborne, John, First Baron Seaton 5

Guards (Scots Guards) in 1820-1821 when he reported on regimental problems.

Colborne was Lieutenant Governor of Guernsey Island, 1821-1828, and William Napier held the same office during 1842-1847. Comment about the island and Elizabeth College appear in 1828-1830, 1836, and 1842.

The civil and military careers of General Sir Charles James Napier, a brother of William and George Napier, is noted often throughout the correspondence. He was resident of Cephalonia in the Ionian Islands, 1822-1830, and they are noted in 1820-1821, 1825, and 1835-1836. His abortive appointment as Governor of South Australia was discussed on July 7, 1835, and Nov. 1, 1836.

Colborne's tenure as Lieutenant Governor of Upper Canada is represented by only two letters: Nov. 1, 1836, and Oct. 1, 1837. Governor General Sir James Kempt was noted on Jan. 27, 1829.

George Napier resided for a time at Pau, France, from where he reported on French politics on Jan. 12 and June 17, 1830.

British politics received occasional comment:

Colborne, John, First Baron Seaton 7

Oct. 15, 1820; Jan. 27, 1829; and June 17, 1830.

George Napier was Governor at the Cape of Good Hope when he wrote about the frontier problem with the Kaffirs on March 29, 1841.

The Crimean War was noted on Nov. 28, 1854.

There are frequent references to the education and early military careers of George Napier's sons: General George Thomas Conolly Napier; Capt. John Moore Napier; and General William Craig Emilius Napier. John Moore Napier, the son of Sir William, is also noted.

Colborne, John First Baron Seaton

6 items added, 4-4-75: Two letters from Henry Hobhouse in 1822 convey authorization from Sir Robert Peel at the Home Office to incur some public expenses. A letter from Lord Palmerston at the War Office is of similar subject. Colborne writes an unknown government official, possibly of the Board of Audit, in 1822 in reply to a query. The other items are a receipt for funds from the Treasury in 1825 and an autograph dated in 1839.

Cole, Arthur Vance. Papers. Durham,
Durham Co., N.C.

Arthur Vance Cole (1880-1976) of Durham, North Carolina, is a man who, while working at several different kinds of jobs over a long career, also threw himself into significant areas of community activity. Three items in the collection provide explicit biographical data on Cole: a vita sheet attached to the letter of May 29, 1934; a rough draft of what was probably to be a letter applying for a job

Cole, Arthur Vance

(Miscellany: Jan. 19, 1920); and a partially-completed Duke University Alumni Association form requesting biographical facts (Miscellany: April 19, 1935). There seems to be no biographical directories that would apply to his case. His obituary was in the Durham Morning Herald, March 28, 1976. A feature article about him was in the Durham Sun, April 6, 1973, A3:1.

Cole was born in a log cabin near Roxboro on October 21, 1880, was graduated from Durham High School in 1901 and from Trinity College with an A.B. degree in 1905. Between 1905 and 1917, he served as teacher, principal or superintendent at the following schools in his home state: Newton Grove, Selma, Taylorsville, Pilot Mountain, and Oriental. He married Bessie Dixon Whitaker in 1908, and they had one child, an adopted daughter. He is a member of the Methodist Church.

In June, 1917, after four years at Oriental High School, Cole became an assistant foreman in the Cutting Department of the Durham branch of Liggett and Myers Tobacco Company. It was the first of several career changes for him. He soon became actively involved in trying to organize his fellow employees into a chapter (Local No. 153) of the Tobacco Workers International Union, and, according to his own testimony, was fired in December, 1919, solely as a result of his organizing efforts. For the next few months, Cole worked for T.W.I.U. as a full-time union organizer for $30 a week plus expenses. In addition to Durham, this job took him to Reidsville, N.C., and to Petersburg and Richmond, Virginia. He directed his energies toward both white and black laborers, and his activities were not limited to tobacco workers. He sought to organize a "central labor union" in Durham and also pushed unionization among culinary workers, corresponding with the Hotel and Restaurant Employees' International Alliance and the Bartenders' International League of America. But in April, 1920, Cole wrote to President A. M. McAndrew of T.W.I.U. stating that due to economic necessity, he had to quit his work as a union organizer. The correspondence reveals that Cole's efforts among the workers resulted for the most part in failure. The period, 1919-1920, the time of the Red Scare and of public uproar against the big, postwar strikes, was probably as bad a time to be pushing unions in North Carolina and Virginia as it was anywhere else in the country.

4

Cole and his wife, in the summer of 1920, took a course of intensive study at the School of Pan-American and Foreign Commerce in Washington, D.C., and Cole then sought a job in banking or in the import-export business, concentrating his first efforts on New York City. But he was unsuccessful in locating a suitable position and soon went to work temporarily for the Durham Water Company (1920-1921). In November, 1921, he found a job with the Internal Revenue Service as a "zone deputy collector" in the Durham zone, which consisted of Durham, Person, and Granville Counties. By 1923, he had become deputy in charge of the Durham Internal Revenue Office and continued in this capacity until September, 1933, when he resigned. During the latter part of his work with the I.R.S., Cole attended Raleigh Law School, run by Judge George P. Pell, and gained admission to the North Carolina State Bar in 1932.

7

Cole, Arthur Vance

He soon put his newly-acquired lawyer's training to good use. In early 1935, he secured an appointment in the federal district court system as U.S. Commissioner of the Eastern District of North Carolina, with offices located in Durham. He was apparently reappointed in 1939 and 1943. Durham went into the Middle District in the late 1930s. Cole then seems to have resigned in 1945, but was actively seeking reappointment in 1946. The collection throws no light on his means of making a living after 1945. It is possible that, having reached the age of sixty-five, he went into retirement.

The 1920s was the decade that witnessed the rise of Cole's most enduring interests - the North Carolina Republican Party and the Masons. By 1922 he was working hard for the Republicans, although the period of his greatest commitment to them appears to have been 1926-1936. For many years, Cole was secretary of the Durham County Republican Executive Committee, which often met in his Internal Revenue Office.

Letters as far back as 1919 reveal Cole's membership in the Masons, but it is not until 1928 that the correspondence becomes abundant. Material on the Masons remains plentiful all the way to the end of the collection in 1974, and it seems that, after 1936, most of Cole's energies were directed toward the Masons. He seems to have remained in Durham until August, 1974. At that time, after a big farewell given him by members of Durham Masonic Lodge No. 352, Cole at age ninety-four went to Fountain Inn, South Carolina, to live with his daughter.

The Cole Collection is divided into letters, miscellany, clippings, printed material, pictures, and volumes. The fairly numerous letters of 1919-1920, which convey a fine picture of Cole the union organizer, are perhaps the highlight of the collection. Attached to the letter of August 26, 1919, for example, are the "Declaration of Principles and Policy By the Tobacco Workers' Union, Local No. 153 (White)" and also a brief statement on "Picket Duty." In another letter (October 13, 1919), a T.W.I.U. official writes Cole bemoaning the slow progress of the whites toward organizing while commending the blacks for their success. "The interest of both whites and colored are locked up in the success of the union. The hold back on the part of the Whites is a detriment to their own as well as to the colored people, as both are employed in the same shop with the same objects in view," the letter said. Somewhat later (December 26, 1919), shortly after Cole's firing, President McAndrew wrote to Cole offering him the job as organizer, which Cole accepted in a letter of January 14, 1920.

In early February, 1920, Cole was sent to Petersburg, where the firing of 125 male and female employees of the British-American Tobacco Company had erupted into a big controversy (January 22 and February 5, 1920). According to the workers involved, they had been discharged solely for belonging to a union and blacklisted in all the company's factories in other cities. Cole spent several weeks in Petersburg and, hoping to take advantage of the atmosphere created by the firings, he seems to have worked hard to make the local union viable. But in a letter back to a national T.W.I.U. official, he reveals that he found the going tough (Feb. 25, 1920). A meeting he had called for blacks had failed, Cole began. "As to the White Union

folks, it seems that those still working in the V.A. (British-American Tobacco Company) Shop are afraid to attend the meetings (with a few exceptions) and are afraid to push organization, and as to those discharged, who are out or working elsewhere, they have or are becoming indifferent." Cole soon returned to Durham, and in April, 1920, he gave up union organizing. He wrote to T.W.I.U. President McAndrew, stating his financial situation was desperate and that the cause of labor was still his cause. " I shall go to work Monday morning for the first man I meet who wants a hand and will continue to do anything I can to promote the interest of the two Tobacco Workers' Unions in Durham or any other craft there" (verso of letter of April 8, 1920).

The letters concerning Cole's involvement with the Durham County Republicans are most plentiful during the period of 1926-1936 and are mainly just routine messages usually sent or received around election time, such as notices of meetings of the local G.O.P. Executive Committee, requests for endorsements, words of encouragement, notes thanking Cole for his work. One of the best letters in the collection on politics is that of February 6, 1930, in which Marion Butler makes suggestions about G.O.P. strategy in the upcoming elections. Perhaps his most important point is that North Carolina Republicans should nominate a strong candidate for U.S. Senator, since due to the Simmons bolt of 1928, the Democrats were split in 1930. The letters of March, 1934, reveal much about the factional strife in the state Republican Party over the election of a state chairman after the party suffered big losses in 1930 and 1932.

Another outstanding letter comes from June 4, 1935, shortly after Cole accepted the appointment in the federal district court system as U.S. Commissioner for Eastern North Carolina. This long letter was written to Cole by Charles D. Wildes, U.S. Commissioner at Raleigh, for the purpose of giving Cole advice on how to handle his new job. One of the most interesting sections of the letter is the advice Wildes offers on race relations. There are several other letters touching on Cole as U.S. Commissioner, but nothing too revealing about his activities or opinions in that capacity.

Beginning in 1937, the Masons begin to dominate the letters. Perhaps the finest item on Masonry in the collection is an address by a chaplain of the Masons, "Masonry in an Uprooted World," attached to the letter of May 1, 1937.

Several other topics are touched on in the remainder of the correspondence down to 1974, including class reunions and graduation exercises at Duke University. In addition, some letters from the 1960s on concern personal matters - especially from Cole's daughter Alice.

The material filed under "Miscellany" reflects Cole's major activities. There are several cigarette formulas from 1912-1917 and a series of weekly "Itemized Statements of Expenses" that Cole filled out as a union organizer in 1920. Sometimes on the verso of these statements he provides a summary of his activities for the week. Among items that concern the Durham County Republicans are a tabulation by precinct of the Durham County vote for governor in 1928, the minutes of several meetings of the Durham County Republican Executive Committee, and "Minutes of the Durham County Republican Convention of 1936," the plans of organization for the North Carolina G.O.P. for 1936 and 1940, and what seems to be lists of registered Republicans in Durham County. Items in "Miscellany" dealing with the Masons include a certificate proclaiming Cole a High Priest (1932) and several addresses, articles, speeches, programs, and membership lists about Masonry and/or the activities of the Durham Masonic Lodge.

There are two folders of "Clippings" in the collection. Subjects touched on in the first folder include labor and the I.T.W.U., the Masons, and the state Republican Party. There is also a copy of a newspaper photograph of Cole taken on the occasion of the farewell given him by the Durham Masons in August, 1974. The second folder concerns a debate in Raleigh in May, 1922, on the theory of evolution. Clippings collected give a full account both pro and con arguments.

The collection's "Printed Material" is divided into three sections. The first one has in it a few general items such as cards urging tobacco workers to organize and announcing meetings for them, a post card with quotations from Robert G. Ingersoll on it, and a map of parks and recreation areas in Durham dated 1953. The bulk of the printed material is in the second section, which is on the Masons. Items include membership cards from Masonic organizations, issues of periodicals published by the Masons, pamphlets promoting the Masons, other leaflets instructing the Masons on how to promote their cause, and programs from various Masonic functions - local, state, and national. The most notable program is that issued on the occasion when a portrait of James Southgate (1832-1914), a founder of the Durham Masonic Lodge, was presented to the lodge. The program includes a picture of the portrait and copies of the speeches made at the presentation ceremony. There is also a program from the Red Fez Spring Ceremonial of 1922, held in Durham. On page 93 is an account of Cole's long career with the Masons.

Possibly the most interesting section of the printed material is the last, which contains a few items involving the Republican Party. There is, for example, campaign literature for Republican candidates, usually local but sometimes state and national, from such elections as those of 1928, 1936, and 1948. The outstanding piece is an issue of Uncensored (dated March 1, 1936) - a Republican campaign paper that vigorously attacks F.D.R. and the New Deal in articles and cartoons.

Finally, there are the "Pictures" and the "Volumes." The outstanding picture is a

Cole, Arthur Vance

27

10 X 6½ inch black and white photograph of Cole at age ninety-four. The other pictures are twenty 8 X 10 in. photographs of the Shrine parade in Durham in 1948 (or perhaps 1946). The first of the seven volumes is Cole's record book of dues which he paid to Local No. 153 of T.W.I.U. The book shows that he was initiated into the union on August 9, 1919, and continued to pay his dues of 15¢ per week through June 13, 1920. The second volume is Cole's memorandum book of December, 1919, through May, 1920, during most of which time he worked as a union organizer. Most of the pages are stamped with the year 1919, but this is almost certainly 1920, since Cole was not initiated into the union until August, 1919, and since the entries in the book clearly refer to his union activities. Most of the entries are vague notes recording dates and places of meetings. The third volume is another memorandum book used by Cole in about this same period, dating from February 23 to April 10, 1920. This one seems to have been primarily a book in which Cole kept track of his expenses in his organizing work - meals, laundry, cigars, and other things. There are other kinds of entries, too, especially daily remarks about what Cole had done during the course of the day. These first three volumes, together with the letters and the items under Miscellany and Printed Material could probably be used to put together a fair account of Cole's days as an organizer for T.W.I.U.

The next three volumes concern the Durham

Cole, Arthur Vance

30

County Republicans. Cole's "Book for the Campaigns of 1928 and 1930" contain names, addresses, and phone numbers of the County Republican Executive Committee and of local candidates in the Election of 1928. In addition there is some correspondence from the party's state office about the campaign of 1930. Other kinds of entries in this rather confusing volume include tabulations of votes by precinct and unlabeled names and addresses. The next volume is labeled the "Minute Book" of the County

Cole, Arthur Vance

31

Republican Executive Committee for the campaign of 1934 and seems to consist of Cole's rough drafts of the minutes of the meetings. Likewise, the collection's sixth volume is labeled the "Minute Book" for the committee in the campaign of 1936, and like the preceding volume, it appears to be Cole's rough drafts of the minutes.

The final volume comes from Cole's years as U.S. Commissioner - it is his Record of Proceedings in Criminal Cases and covers the period 1935-1945. Most but not all the cases recorded were heard before Cole and in Durham. Information on each case includes names of the person making the complaint and the defendant, references to the law which was allegedly broken, a list of witnesses subpoenaed, and the subsequent history of the case down to the verdict. Perusal of this volume naturally provides some indication of the kinds of cases Cole hears as U.S. Commissioner.

Cole, John Nelson. Papers, 1873-1948. Raleigh, Wake Co., N. C. 7 items & 1 vol. Sketch.

The six items include three personal letters by the Rev. Dr. John Nelson Cole, a minister in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and Superintendent of the Methodist Orphanage in Raleigh, N. C. He writes to his sister, Mrs. William H. Burwell; and to a daughter of his, who may be Mrs. Lucy (Cole) Durham (Mrs. Plato T. Durham).

Mrs. Durham, in any event, writes to Dr. Benjamin E. Powell, Librarian of Duke U., on Sept. 20, 1948, transmitting her father's scrapbook and a letter by her brother, Louis Cole, since deceased, to their aunt, Mrs. William H. Burwell.

There is a tract on Baptism in a Nutshell * (1891) by the Rev. Dr. Charles Taylor, M. D., D. D., of the Ky. Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

The scrapbook (1892-1898), contains mostly newspaper and magazine clippings, some of them written by J. N. Cole under his real name and some under "Eloc Noslin" and similar pseudonyms. Cole criticizes the Baptists for changing the Bible, for practicing immersion, for holding close communion, and for not allowing enough liberty of conscience. He denies that Jesus was a Missionary Baptist and asserts that the Methodist doctrine is the true one.

On p. 12 is a poem intitlled "Lines by John Newton," probably written by John Newton Cole. On p. 8 is a clipping from the Raleigh, N. C., State Chronicle of Mar. 11, 1893 containing the obituary remarks by Judge Walter Clark, Sr. at the Memorial Meeting of the State Bar on Nov. 23, 1892, in appreciation of the late N. C. Chief Justice Augustus Summerfield Merrimon (see p. 8).

Cole, John Nelson

Three items discuss Greensboro (N. C.) Female College (now Greensboro College) and the prospect of establishing a Methodist female college in Raleigh (see pp. 9-11).

There is a "Dedicatory Ode" on p. 11 written by Frank Lebbey Stanton for the cotton exposition in Atlanta on Sept. 18, 1895, and read by Albert Howell, Jr.

Cole has obituary notices for William W. Holden and several others (see pp. 2-7). In his funeral sermon for the late Rev. Dr. R. O. Burton he criticizes the Presbyterian doctrines of John Calvin. Resolutions of commendation for Cole's ministry appear on p. 5.

On P. 168 is a newspaper clipping containing a letter of July 26, 1584 by Sir Walter Raleigh to Richard Duke giving the writer's birthplace near Budleigh Salterton, South Devonshire, Eng.

Three letters of 1849-1853 written by J. [John?] Locke Smith to his brothers, one of them W.B. Smith, of Spring Grove, North Carolina discusses floods in Louisiana, emigration to Texas, and advancing land prices there.

Most of the items in this addition are personal letters (1862-1892) by Mrs. Ann (Raney)

Thomas Coleman from Cuero and other places in Texas to her relatives. Two undated letters are by Mrs. Mary (Raney) Smith, who may have been her sister and the wife of J. Locke Smith.

Mrs. Coleman's son-in-law is in Chase's Battalion at Victoria, Texas. Insubordinate troops and blockade running in Texas in 1864 are mentioned.

Papers from 1879, 1888, and 1889 relate to the settlement of Mrs. Coleman's father's estate in England.

Families discussed are the Emersons, Raneys, and Thomases.

A major portion of Mrs. Coleman's journal has been published. See: Victorian Lady on the Texas Frontier; the Journal of Ann Raney Coleman. Edited by C. Richard King. Norman: University of Oklahoma Press, 1971.

Mrs. Coleman was an Episcopalian who became a Methodist. She notes the building of a Methodist church in Texas (see the fourth section of her reminiscences.) There are also comments on the Presbyterians.

Coleman, Hawes H. Papers, 1806-1921. Arkadelphia, Ark. 87 items & 1 vol. Sketch

Family correspondence of the Coleman family, including accounts of the social life and customs in Arkansas during and after the Civil War. There is an interesting letter from R. H. Wright, a Confederate soldier, describing a skirmish around Drewry's Bluff, Early's Washington raid and the inflationary conditions of money and army pay; another letter dated Sept. 9, 1866 describes the reaction of the Negroes during the early days of Reconstruction, and the burning of Brenham,

Tex., by Federal troops. A letter which appears in the diary is concerned with Hawes H. Coleman resigning as editor of the Arkansas Baptist (newspaper); letter dealing with conflict between Baptists and Methodists over the establishment of a church. A deed, plus contracts, for the transfer of land and letters dealing with the clearing of estates appears in the collection. There are letters dealing with the establishment of Ouachita College in Arkadelphia, Ark.; the labor situation during Reconstruction; pensions to

Emilie S. Coles was born between 1842 and 1845, the daughter of Abraham and Caroline Elizabeth (Ackerman) Coles. Her brother, Jonathan Ackerman Coles, was a noted surgeon. It appears from the obituaries in the New York Times of Jonathan A. Coles and Ernest R. Ackerman that Emilie married James Hervey Ackerman and had two sons, Ernest R. and Marion S., and two daughters, whose married names were Mrs. Robert Rushmore and Mrs. Lydia A. Murphy.

Coles, Emilie S.

Emilie wrote both prose and verse which was published in various newspapers and periodicals. At least part of her prose was written for children.

The papers in this collection consist largely of correspondence from editors to Emilie S. Coles, but there are some letters from Mary J. Porter, a "pen" friend, and a few letters to Emilie's father. Among the correspondents other than Mary Porter, are: Helen E. Brown, Glenn Frank, Sam H. Hall, Edward D.G. and Samuel I. Prime, Charles A. Stoddard, and John H. Vincent.

This collection is from the Marmaduke Floyd Collection.

Thomas Hightower Collins, journalist, was born in Cedartown, Georgia, in 1910. He studied at the University of Georgia, 1929-1931, and at Georgia State College, 1931-1935. In 1946 he married Beulah Blagden Stowe. His career in the newspaper industry included the following positions: reporter for the De Kalb New Era of Decatur, Georgia, 1932-1935; copyreader and picture editor for the Atlanta

In 1962 he retired to Chapel Hill, N. C., where he has continued to write syndicated columns and books. Biographical information on him appears in Who's Who in America, an autobiographical statement of March 6, 1967, and newspaper and magazine articles that are filed at the beginning of the collection.

The collection represents Collins' work as the author of newspaper columns, books, and pamphlets on old-age retirement. His basic publications are two columns that are syndicated by General Features Corporation of New York - "The Golden Years," a weekly feature since 1950, and "The Senior Forum," a daily begun in 1956. Their history is discussed in Collins' statement of March 6, 1967. "The Golden Years" was a pioneer national column in the retirement field.

Collins, Thomas Hightower

Collins used the pseudonym of Paul Hightower for "The Senior Forum." The popularity of these articles encouraged the publication of related books and pamphlets, notably The Golden Years, An Invitation to Retirement (New York, 1956) and its paperback edition, The Golden Years of Retirement (Doubleday: Garden City, N. Y., 1963). The Golden Years was published by Bluebook in April, 1956, and was also condensed for newspaper serialization. Two booklets bear a similar title. Collins added a third column in 1956 - "Inquiring About Retiring," a monthly article appearing in Harvest Years. The collection includes copies - not manuscripts - of most of these works. In addition, there is a large quantity of letters that readers sent to the author. They should be useful for certain types of studies of old-age problems. Because of their bulk, they are arranged only by years that begin in 1951. There are small groups of miscellaneous printed material and press releases.

9000 items added, 6-15-76. This additional material is summarized below, and it has also been inserted in the above description of the arrangement of the collection.

Typescripts of "The Senior Forum" date: Dec., 1956-Aug., 1958; July, 1959-Jan., 1960; Jan.-June, 1961; and May, 1962-March, 1963.

Typescripts of "The Golden Years" date from July, 1950, to Nov., 1955, and from May, 1957, to May, 1958, but many issues are missing from within the series. Letters and other materials are often attached to the typescripts of articles to which they are related.

The correspondence from readers dates from 1963 to 1973. It is arranged by years only.

Writings and addresses consist of several speeches and articles of 1967-1968, some of them descriptive of life in Chapel Hill.

2456 items added, 7-13-77. This material consists of letters from readers, 1967-1976, mostly 1972-1976. These letters have been integrated into the correspondence.

2531 items added, 3-26-79. This addition consists primarily of letters, 1966-1974, from readers of Collins' columns. There are also a number of his addresses and writings, 1961-1973, about various aspects of old age and retirement. Several speeches also are interesting for comment upon newspaper (1965-1969) and advertising (1964-1969) businesses and youth (1969) in America. There are also small quantities of printed mater-

Collins, William F. Notebook, 1826. Middletown, Middlesex County, Connecticut.

William F. Collins attended the American Literary, Scientific and Military Academy at Middletown, Connecticut, during the summer of 1826. The founder of this academy was Alden Partridge, a prominent military educator. He established the school in 1819 at Norwich, Vermont, where it remained except for the period, 1825-1829, when it was located at Middletown. In 1834 the academy became Norwich University, which is now situated at Northfield, Vermont. This volume contains notes that Collins took during lectures by Partridge on fortifications, artillery, gunnery, attack, defence, and tactics (pp. 49-138). The first part of the volume is a miscellany of letters, obituaries, poems or songs, and eulogies. Included among the obituaries is that of Peter Prowel, a professor of Spanish at the academy (pp. 26-27).

Collins may be the Dr. William Collins who joins with several other persons in the operation of the Portsmouth Academy at

Collins, William

Portsmouth, Virginia, in 1840. Partridge is also involved in this endeavor and with the operation of the school. See Bound Volume File for Portsmouth Academy, Journal of the Proceedings of the Trustees, 1825-1847, pp. 72-78. The connection of Partridge with the Portsmouth Academy is noted in his biographical sketch in the Dictionary of American Biography.

COLQUITT, Alfred Holt. Letters. 1843[?]-1889.
Troup County, Georgia. 2 pieces. Sketch.

Walker Terry Colquitt (1799-1855) was born in Virginia, moved to Georgia, and became a lawyer and judge. He was elected to Congress from which he resigned in 1848. His son, Alfred Holt Colquitt (1824-1894) was born in Georgia, educated at Princeton, served in the Mexican War, entered Congress as a Democrat in 1853, was a member of the Georgia secession convention, and then entered the Confederate army, becoming a major general. In 1876 he began to serve an eight year term as governor of Ga. and also filled an unexpired term in the U.S. Senate [See D.A.B., IV, 315f.]

Colquitt, A. H.

The first letter in this collection was written by Walter T. Colquitt, probably in 1843. He is concerned with the national political scene and the appointment of his brother-in-law, Thomas L. Ross, as postmaster in Macon. He states that Calhoun is his favorite for the presidency, that he is in favor of a national nominating convention, thinks both Thomas Hart Benton and Mr. Wright, perhaps Joseph A. Wright, will either be opposed or indifferent to such a convention, believes Lewis Cass has a good chance of being nominated and he would support him, and says he is not interested in the vice-presidential nomination but would not refuse it.

Colquitt, A. H.

The second letter is from Alfred H. Colquitt to C. C. Jones, Jr. in 1889, congratulating the latter on a recent address in which he criticized some of the current ideas about the "New" South.

3 items added 3-24-52. These consist of an invitation from Colquitt and others to some captain, maybe John Flannery of Savannah, to be present at the laying of the corner stone of a "Memorial Hall" in Atlanta to commemorate the reunion of the states and the return of peace, and two autographs.

Colquitt, Alfred Holt

1 item added, 2-15-75: Undated poem written in ink, according to a note on the verso of the manuscript, by "Judge Colquit of Georgia," who presumably was Walter Terry Colquitt, father of Alfred Holt Colquitt. The untitled poem begins, "Tiger! my dog; . . ."

Wm. Neyle Colquitt was a lawyer, newspaper reporter and publisher, and politician. The papers in this collection are largely correspondence relating to the pre-convention campaigns of Judson Harmon and Oscar W. Underwood, recommendations of Colquitt for several federal positions, and the raising of funds for and erecting of a monument at Midway, Ga. to the memory of Gens. James Screven and Daniel Stewart.

Colquitt backed Harmon for the Democratic presidential nomination of 1912 until Underwood entered the race, and then he transferred his support to him. G. R. Hutchens was manager of the Underwood headquarters in Atlanta, and Colquitt was the publicity manager for Georgia. After Wilson was nominated Colquitt supported him.

Colquitt was rewarded with the clerkship of the Committee on Ways and Means in the House of Repres. In 1915 and 1916 he served as master in chancery of the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Ga.

Colquitt served as secretary of the Midway monument committee. There are a printed copy of An Historiette of Midway, pictures of the design that was rejected and the one that was accepted for that monument, and a picture of some select-men of the Midway Church.

There are remarks in the correspondence about

Hoke Smith's part in the pre-convention campaign, Tom Helfin's ability as an orator, Gov. Joseph M. Brown's popularity with the farmers and his attitude toward Tom Watson, and the latter's opposition to Wilson.

William Combe (1741-1823), British author, supplied the text for A History of the University of Oxford, Its Colleges, Halls, and Public Buildings (London, 1814) that was published by Rudolph Ackermann. A manuscript volume (21 pp., 18 illus.) entitled "Oxford University" includes seventeen color plates that Ackermann published during 1813-1814 for this history of Oxford. The plates depict the academic costumes of the University. An explanatory, handwritten text accompanies each illustration. This text may or may not be a copy of Combe's work. In any case, the handwriting probably dates from the 1820's, for the unknown writer or copyist used several pages that bear a watermark of 1823 (pp. 7, 13, 21).

The first plate (black and white) illustrates the dress of the Chancellor with a portrait of William Wyndham, First Baron Grenville, who

The color plates depict the costumes of a: doctor in divinity (2); doctor in physic (2); bachelor of laws; doctor in music; master of arts; bachelor of arts; nobleman undergraduate; gentleman commoner; commoner; student in civil law; scholar; servitor; bachelor of divinity; collector; proctor; gentleman commoner and nobleman (undress gowns); pro proctor; vice chancellor; esquire beadle; yeoman beadle; and a verger.

The letters in this collection are addressed to Nathaniel and Catherine Comer of Davie Co., N. C., from their son, Russell G. Comer, and their sons-in-law, Thomas Beaman (married to Rachel Comer) and Joel W. Thomas (married to Christiana Comer), all of whom were residing in Pettis County, Missouri. There is also a letter from Nancy H. Seamans of Halifax County, Virginia, to her aunt, Sarah Griffin, of Davie County, North Carolina. Most of the letters are routine family correspondence concerning the health of the families, state of crops, and price of produce.

Some of the more interesting letters were written during the Mexican War. On July 20, 1846, Russell G. Comer wrote that he had volunteered to march with the troops who were going to protect the American traders in Santa Fe. As the quotas from Missouri were filled, however, he volunteered to drive a team and wagon for a salary of $15 per month. In April of 1847, Russell wrote of some of the hardships of crossing the plains in winter. In addition to being without a fire, he often was without anything to eat. He had bought a mule in the Spanish territory but it was stolen by the Indians. Despite the hardships he planned to answer the new call for volunteers and go with the army marching to Santa Fe. He hoped that there would not be too great a number leaving his state, lest the Indians break out in the absence of the men.

Comer, Nathaniel

In a letter of October 14, 1847, Thomas Beaman reported that General Scott had lost one-half his army in taking Mexico City. Bea-man's only regret was that the United States had not sent a sufficient force to take the entire province at once.

Comer, Nathaniel

The rush to California in 1849 also drew the attention of the adventurous Russell Comer. In order to finance his trip to the gold mines he planned to drive a team from Fort Leavenworth to Santa Fe. By February 15, 1849, Russell had set out for California, and, according to Joel Thomas's letter of that date, so had approximately 50,000 other persons. Thomas feared for Russell's life because of the numerous cholera outbreaks among the emigrants. Because of the outbreaks of disease, Russell did not go on to California in 1849 or 1850, but in 1850 he went with five other men from Independence, Mo., to Salt Lake City with the U. S. mail. Among the things that impressed him most on this trip were the numerous graves of emigrants along the trail which was a portion of the Oregon Trail. The Mormons treated them well but charged high prices for commodities. As on one of his earlier journeys, the mules were run off by Indians and he and his companions were forced to complete their trip on foot.

War Letters
70 pieces.

This entire collection is composed of the letters of two brothers, Merrit and Joshua Comfort, who enlisted in the New York State Volunteers in the spring of 1862 and saw active service against the Confederacy. The letters were written to their parents, Alvah and Cereba Comfort, who lived either in, or nearby, Ithaca New York.

The collection has several interesting aspects.

COMFORT, Joshua and Merrit Letters --2--

The brothers, in different regiments, met briefly in Washington at the beginning of their service and then separated for the duration of the war. Merrit remained in Maryland and Virginia; whereas, Joshua served in Virginia a short time, then went to Tennessee, and was one of Sherman's army in the march through Georgia and the Carolinas. There are a few letters between the brothers. They met again in Washington at the end of the war.

Merrit Comfort became a corporal in the colours guard of Company G in the 109th. regiment of the New York State Volunteers.

COMFORT, Joshua and Merrit Letters -3-

Joshua Comfort remained a private in Company I of the 137th.

The experiences of Merrit Comfort were exceptional. Stationed at Camp Cornell near Washington from December, 1862 to October, 1863, he saw nothing of battle. His company then was detailed to Upper Marlboro, Maryland, where the men undertook recruiting duties. Stationed in "a large white house" he and his company lived sumptuously; Merrit gained twenty pounds. His only duty seemed to be to stand guard every fifth night. "I am in the house a siting By the Coal Stove! That is the way we stand guard."

COMFORT, Joshua and Merrit Letters -4-

His letters at that time contain some information on military conscription. He writes of the drafting of all Maryland negroes and other draft measures. In April, 1864, he was still having a "bullytime" with a barrell of beer in his sleeping quarters,

Twenty months had passed after his enlistment before Merrit Comfort was involved in battle. This was at Fredericksburg, Virginia in May 1864. He wrote that at this time he had gotten used to the bullets whizzing around his head but he "still feared the little shells that bark when they strike." From this date on his letters contain news of battle; he was in the midst of some of the bloodiest fighting in the entire war. His letters described the seige and surrender of Petersburg, Virginia and mentioned on July 30, 1864, the undermining and blowing up of the "Crater" and the Union attack that followed. An interesting letter of July 29, 1864 mentions the trading between the rebels and the yankees in the front lines, of tobacco and coffee. On February 3, 1865 he wrote of the Confederate Peace Commissioners, Stevens, Hunter, Myers, and Hatch passing through the Union lines on their way to the Hampton Roads Conference, and he mentioned the lull in the fighting that followed as both armies awaited the outcome. On March 25, 1865 he writes of a large "one hundred pound gun" of the enemy that had been silenced.

Joshua Comfort saw more active service than did his brother, Merrit, but he wrote fewer letters. As early as December, 1862, he had been in battle in Virginia and was actively involved from that time on. A letter of December 13, 1862 describes the battle at Missionary Ridge, Tennessee; the rest of his letters are concerned with Sherman's Devastating march. They describe the great destruction wrought by the troops and the attitude of the soldiers who were having a "bully time" in the worlds best fed army. Joshua's division was the first to reach Savannah.

On April 8, 1865 at Goldsboro, North Carolina, Joshua described the surrender of 8,000 men to Sherman by a Confederate General who had "enough of slaughter!" A letter from Merrit Comfort on April 10th., 1865 speaks of an official bulletin telling of Lee's surrender.

Dress parades in Washington in the spring of 1865 are described and the letters end with "amustering out of service tomorrow!"

COMFORT, Joshua and Merrit Letters -8-

The collection has much material on the living conditions of the soldiers. Other war matters such as deserters, battles, pay, furloughs, and military duties are of interest.

Compton, Samuel Wilson. Papers. Manchester,
Adams Co., Ohio

Samuel Wilson Compton, who was at various times employed as a farmer, soldier, peddler, and teacher, was born in Adams County, Ohio, on January 3, 1833. His parents were Harriet Ann (Donelson) and Stephen Wilson Compton, a saddler and farmer. Compton spent his early life in Manchester, Ohio, where he probably was born, and attended both Miami University and Lebanon Normal School. During the Civil War he was with the 12th Ohio Volunteer Infantry.

After the war he, his wife Elizabeth, and children travelled in Iowa, Indiana, Wisconsin, Minnesota, and Michigan, where he took jobs as a teacher, farmer, and book peddler. He finally settled in Eureka, Illinois, where he spent his last days.

The letter in this collection was written on July 30, 1918, by Caroline Compton to the members of the Board of Education in Roanoke, Illinois. It is an application to teach in the seventh and eighth grades.

The volumes, which were written between the years 1919 and 1925, are fourteen stenographer's notebooks written in longhand. They form a combination autobiography and record of reminiscences, although the volumes do not fall into a logical chronological sequence. When these notebooks were written, Compton was rather old, and there is some overlapping and repetition of incidents, particularly those concerning public schools and farming in Ohio, Lyman Beecher and the Presbyterian ministers, and his Civil War experiences.

Although the notebooks do not follow any rigid organization, Books 1-8 and 10, in general,

Compton, Samuel Wilson

detail Compton's early experiences in the 1830's through 1850's. He described his life as a lad on a farm, wheat harvesting, the school he attended, and experiences at Miami University and Lebanon Normal College. Book 6 contains philosophical speculation and criticism of America. In Books 9 and 10 there is information concerning Israel Donelson, Compton's maternal grandfather in the late 1700's and early 1800's. Donelson was a surveyor and founder of Manchester who knew Daniel Boone and Simon Kenton. Compton mentions these two men briefly. The last four volumes generally concern Compton's Civil War experiences and travels after the war. As a member of the 12th Ohio Volunteer Infantry (Co. F), he participated in the battles at Antietam, Lynchburg, and South Mountain. He also discussed the reaction of the Ohio legislature to the firing on Fort Sumter, seeing Abraham Lincoln, and a meeting with Stonewall Jackson's sister.

Head of Society for the Suppression of Vice.

Postcard from H.W.T. to Comstock. The writer reports having won $500.00 in the Louisiana Lottery and suggests that Comstock has a good chance of winning the next one and retiring from his "nefarious callings."

GUIDE

Comstock, W. S., and Co. Papers, 1849-1851.
Montgomery, Ala. 7 items. Sketch.

Letters to P. L. Coley, New England manufacturer of shoes. These letters contain orders for shoes, complaints about the number of shoes being sent by Coley, a suggestion that he might do well to come to Alabama where he could buy richer lands for six to eight dollars per acre than he could in New England for forty dollars, and a quotation of the price of butter, lard, and flour in Montgomery in Nov., 1851.
